Stranded elephant seal gets a little help from a friend who just wouldn't give up

By TAMARA GRIPPI

CARMEL BEACH held an unusual sight early Tuesday morning: A man knelt before a beached elephant seal, clasping his hands and pleading with the animal to stay awake.

"Don't die on me," Rick Miner, an employee with Carmel's Forest and Beach Department, begged the seal.

And the seal barked back.

For two hours, Miner kept watch over the seal, talking to it and fending off dogs until help from the SPCA arrived.

The 150- to 200-pound yearling had dragged itself up on shore sometime before 8 a.m. The animal was lethargic, barely able to keep its glassy eyes open.

Like a parent caring for a sick child, Miner tried to keep the animal awake. "Come on, don't give up on me," Miner encouraged.

And after a while the seal began lifting up its head and offering a sort of growl-bark at Miner.

"He's talking now," Miner said. "If I had

Clinton scandal could keep Panetta out of Governor's race

By PAUL MILLER

THE SUDDEN scandal that erupted around President Clinton this week may have profound consequences for California politics, and could make it very difficult for former White House Chief of Staff and Carmel Valley resident Leon Panetta to run for Governor this year.

President Clinton has denied having a sexual relationship with former White House intern Monica Lewinsky. But Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr reportedly has audio tapes in which Lewinsky talks in detail about having an affair with the President three years ago when she was a 21-year old college intern and Mr. Clinton was 48.

The implications for Panetta — a nine-term Congressman from Carmel and one of Monterey County's best-

POLICE BELIEVE the teen-age boy sought for harassing Carmel children near River School was not always alone in his silver sedan.

Although there is only the one composite sketch of the white teenager with a "pockmarked" complexion, police believe he had at least other three teens riding with him.

In at least one of the five reported cases, the teen who fits the description is not the driver but the one who frightened a grammar school-aged girl.

In another report, a young girl reported that at least three, and possibly four, boys were in that same silver car. All of them were making "hooting, hollering noises," according to Sgt. Bruce Palmer of the

Judge ends couple's nine-month nightmare

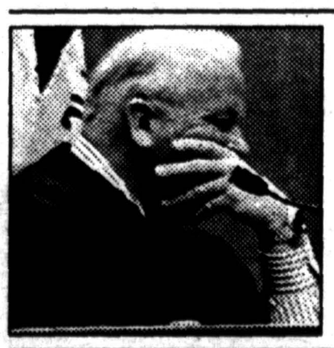
By KIRSTIE WILDE

THE HONORABLE Judge William Curtis buried his head in his hands. It was a show of frustration at the spectacle being played out in Superior Court #1 on Tuesday: a gargantuan struggle of a Carmel couple to divide the spoils of a 23-year marriage.

The spoils in this case consisted of less than $20,000, a 15-year-old Pontiac, an Italian sailor's pension that may never be collected, and some cases of wine in a storage locker.

The fight over the modest property cost more than $25,000 in attorney's fees. And that didn't include paying for the bizarre fight in court on Jan. 20, during which Judge Curtis lamented, "This is not a trial. This is an absolute waste of my time!"

This is the story of how life in Paradise turned into a nine-month nightmare, and the judge who finally put a marriage out of its misery.



'This is not a trial. This is an absolute waste of my time!'

— Judge William Curtis

Divorce, Italian-American style

There doesn't seem any point in identifying the unhappy Carmel couple, except to add humiliation to that which they have already heaped upon each other. So we shall call them Sharon and Mario. (The wife begged The Pine Cone to cover the trial, saying that she feared she was "being railroaded by crooked lawyers, a lying husband, and unnamed criminals who might harm them both.")

The two met in Tahoe, and married in Italy in 1974. They lived for 22 years in Carmel, 16 of which the husband — an Italian citizen — spent as a colorful, singing waiter at a local restaurant and the wife worked as a housewife and proprietor of a small gift shop. Last April they separated.

That is when long-simmering animosity exploded in horrible accusations of wife-beating, stealing from employ-

Police search for real estate broker in $50,000 embezzlement

Suspect reportedly spotted Tuesday in downtown Monterey

By TAMARA GRIPPI

A CARMEL real estate broker suspected of pocketing $50,000 from one of his transactions is on the run from authorities and has been seen in the area.

Grand theft suspect John Dennis Rogers, Jr., who lived and worked in Carmel, was spotted in downtown Monterey as recently as last Tuesday.

On lookout

Police are on the lookout for Rogers, charged with embezzling $50,000 of his friend's money. Although Rogers has stayed away from his Carmel house for nearly two weeks, police have gotten word of numerous sightings of Rogers in the area.

"We believe he's still in the area and will eventually surrender or be arrested," said Carmel Police Chief Don Fuselier.

Police obtained a warrant for Roger's arrest after the suspect failed to show up at his arraignment Dec. 30. Rogers has been charged with felony grand theft and embezzlement.

Police began an investigation back in November when Rogers' friend (whom police did not identify) reported that $50,000 of a loan package that Rogers was supposed to be handling had disappeared.

Back in July, 1996, Rogers' friend financed a $160,000 home loan for a Soquel woman and asked Rogers to handle the deal. When escrow closed, the Soquel woman received $110,000 immediately. Under Rogers' instructions, she was to receive the final $50,000 when her building permits came through, police say.

Matter of trust

Police say the friend left for Mexico, trusting that Rogers would take care of the rest of the loan.

In December, 1996, Rogers allegedly told his friend to make out a $50,000 check to Rogers, which would be placed in a trust account for the Soquel homeowner.

The woman reportedly never received the $50,000. After being put off for nearly a year, she was finally able to track down Rogers' friend in Mexico. The friend flew back to Carmel to find out what happened. Police say Rogers could only offer a convoluted explanation and the friend became suspicious.

Rogers spent the entire $50,000 on himself, police say. Rogers had been employed at one time by a loan broker in the area. Within the last year or so, he was doing business out of his home at the north end of Carmel.

Rogers hasn't been seen in his neighborhood for the last two weeks.

"I don't think he's fled the area, but he must know we're looking him," said Carmel Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras.

The suspect is believed to be driving a blue 1987 Mercury Merkur.

'We believe he's still in the area and will eventually surrender or be arrested.'

— Don Fuselier, Carmel police chief.

Peninsula's seen the worst of flu-like illness

By KIERSTEN MCCUTCHAN

AFTER REACHING near-epidemic proportions, the number of people in Monterey County suffering from influenza-like symptoms and bronchial complications is now dwindling.

"The number of cases peaked between Christmas and New Year's," said Karen Enhert, Monterey County Health Department epidemiologist.

Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula (CHOMP) and Salinas Valley Memorial reported an increase in people — even people who had been vaccinated with an influenza shot — visiting the emergency rooms due to flu symptoms, Enhert reported. "That indicates that it is either not influenza or that it is not one of the three strains covered in the influenza vaccine."

The illness gripped people with all the symptoms of influenza: high fever, upper-respiratory illness, malaise (fatigue), extreme muscle aches lasting for days. "At

Police & Sheriff's Log

Visitor from England so drunk she can't stand up

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Department last week.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 11

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Traffic stop of suspicious vehicle led to arrest of driver on a warrant.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Contacted 2 people carrying television set at Lobos and 3rd. They said they work at a local restaurant and were bringing set to work to watch football games.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Large group of subjects congregating on private property were being served an eviction notice.

Carmel area: South on Hwy. 1 a young woman reports having her car window broken and the contents stolen while parked at Garrapata Creek.

Carmel area: The sheriff observed a photo shoot going on the area of the Highlands and the photographer was using the roadway as subject matter. The photographer, who was from Maine, was doing a shoot for L.L. Bean and he did not have a Caltrans permit.

Pebble Beach: A male resident on Cantera Court attempted to commit suicide by trying to shoot himself with a firearm. He was taken to CHOMP.

MONDAY, JANUARY 12

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Man delivering property before 8 a.m. found front door of shop on Dolores wide open. Officer checked door and interior and could not find any evidence of forced entry or someone entering. Front door was dead-bolted but not shut properly.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Person evicted from property Sunday requested assistance retrieving and identifying personal property.

Carmel Valley: An individual on Meadow Place was involved in an accident. Consequently that individual felt the accident necessitated a forced entry into an acquaintance's residence where he/she cut off the acquaintance's phone conversation with the county. The acquaintance got a head injury when attempting to evict the individual from her house.

Carmel Valley: At Garzas Road a person reported having a dispute with his neighbor over the lack of a key to a circuit breaker box. The matter was resolved when it was decided that a duplicate key would be provided.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 13

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Carmel man arrested for stalking, assaulting and falsely imprisoning his "girlfriend."

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Vehicle driving on Monte Verde without any lights due to short in electrical system. Given an escort home.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Cat reported stuck in garage on 8th near San Carlos. Upon arrival officer freed cat from garage.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: 2 suspicious women reported "casing" leather goods store on

Following Hydorn's lead, council supports transfer of freeway dollars

By PAUL WOLF

ADMITTING THAT "the odds are stacked against us," Councilman Marshall Hydorn Tuesday led the city in passing a resolution urging that $31 million earmarked for the Hatton Canyon freeway be diverted to the proposed Prunedale bypass.

"I don't know if we will be able to change minds," said Hydorn, who represents the council on the 17-member Transportation Agency for Monterey County (TAMC), which officially supports the 2.8-mile parkway despite the Carmel Council's objections.

The city council has oppose the freeway for years, although council members acknowledge the community is deeply divided on the issue, with many locals strongly in favor.

The council voted 4-1, with Bob Fischer dissenting, to approve the resolution. A second resolution, which the council passed 5-0, urges the state to end delays in finishing 12 improvements planned for Highway 1.

Hydorn spoke of needing to change minds because, in October, a majority of the TAMC representatives shot down Monterey County Supervisor Dave Potter's bid to transfer the full $43 million of freeway money to the 7.5-

Report: Car volume on Carmel Valley road leveling off

By TAMARA GRIPPI

WHILE MANY locals have been upset by speeding traffic and dangerous conditions on Carmel Valley Road, a recent survey shows that within the last couple of years the number of cars traveling the road has stayed about the same.

However, in the wake of teenager Ray Avery's death on Carmel Valley Road last October, the county is working on a number of safety improvements. County officials and supervisor Dave Potter are planning a public meeting about safety Jan. 28.

Meanwhile, the Monterey County Public Works Department's survey of daily traffic on the road in 1997 shows relatively small increases in the number of cars cruising some stretches of the road, while the amount of cars on other stretches actually decreased.

"The average daily traffic has stayed pretty constant in recent years," said George Divine, senior engineer for transportation and development.

The "counting loops" on Carmel Valley road have been keeping a consistent tally since they were installed by the county in 1988.

The number of autos on the road had been increasing fairly dramatically until 1991, Divine said. However, the county couldn't link those increases with new construction at the time. "Not much was happening (in construction)," Divine said, noting the water moratorium.

In 1992, monitoring reports showed that the traffic on several sections of Carmel Valley road were nearing the "D" level in an A through F report card. Then the county did a traffic environmental impact report on the road and set up an "action plan" to improve the road.

The board also authorized a "traffic improvement fee" that requires property owners to pay up to $16,000 each time they're granted a new building permit in Carmel Valley. So far, $700,000 has been raised.

The county most likely won't call for a construction moratorium in the valley because the impact fee makes road improvements possible. "The catch 22 is, improvement is funded by new development," Divine said.

Paola Berthoin, a Carmel Valley resident who regularly rides her bike on the road, was skeptical about news that the number of cars has leveled off. "It certainly seems like a lot more traffic to me," she said. "Scientific stuff is one thing. When you're actually on the road it's another."

Public outcry about safety on the road was sparked when Avery was hit and killed after disembarking from an MST bus.

At the first public forum called by Potter in October many locals said they were fed up with fast-moving traffic and dangers of making turns on and off the road.

Since that meeting, the public works department added more 55 mph signs on the two lane section of roadway that hadn't been posted, according to traffic engineer Neal Thompson.

The county also posted the four lane section of Carmel Valley Road as 55 mph (from 65) even though they can't enforce it, because doing so would be considered a "speed trap," according to Thompson. They're just hoping the signs will convince drivers to slow down.

The county also has plans to create eight left-turn pockets on CV Road within the next year. The public works department will conduct a speed survey to see if the speed limit should be lowered to 45 mph on some two-lane stretches.

California Highway Patrol has also upped its presence on the road, putting in a radar trailer and adding motorcycle patrols. "We've been working out there quite a bit," said CHP Lt. Pat Camara.

Camara said that he's even had to pull over some of the people who were at the Carmel Valley Road safety meeting back in October. Although a little embarrassed, they were honest about their speeding, he said.

At 6:30 p.m. January 28, Potter, the sheriff's department and the CHP will host a meeting about safety on Carmel Valley Road at Rancho Cañada Golf Club's Fiesta room.

loved political figures — are twofold:

■ According to sources familiar with the White House, Lewinsky, one of 250 White House interns, worked directly with some of the President's closest advisers, including Panetta. These sources say Panetta very likely knew Lewinsky well and may have supervised her on a day-to-day basis. As Chief of Staff, Panetta worked long hours and probably has insight into the President's official and unofficial activities, sources say. If the Presidential scandal deepens, questions about Panetta's knowledge of the President's conduct could reflect negatively on Panetta.

■ If Panetta runs for Governor, he will have to overcome the fact that he is not well known in California outside Monterey County. He has maintained a low profile since leaving the White House last year, and has not raised money for what promises to be an expensive campaign for governor against millionaire Democratic hopeful Al Checchi, Lt. Governor Gray Davis and likely Republican candidate Dan Lungren.

A Panetta campaign would surely have been predicated on strong support from the White House, including numerous campaign appearances by President Clinton himself. With this new scandal, the value of Presidential appearances would be greatly diminished.

After Dianne Feinstein announced that she would not run for governor late Tuesday, Panetta issued a statement saying he would do some thinking and "spend the next few days reassessing" his own plans. Less than 24 hours later, the new scandal swirled around the White House, complicating Panetta's decision.

Panetta responded to The Pine Cone's request for an interview by faxing a brief statement which did not address the White House scandal.

Carmel High guy awarded scholarship

ALEXANDER VOROBIOV has won a $1,000 scholarship for himself, and $5,000 for his fellow students at Carmel High, by winning this year's 3M Scholarship Essay Contest.

Vorobiov will have a huge audience when he receives his award, because the backdrop for the ceremony is the Celebrity Shoot-out at this year's AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am golf tournament.

Vorobiov, and Becky Silva (who won similar scholarships for herself and North Salinas High School) will be standard bearers, and walk along holes 1,2,3,17 and 18 during the Shoot-out Jan. 28. They will have a close-up view of stars like Bill Murray, Kevin Costner, Michael Douglas, Jack Lemmon, Tommy Smother and Joe Pesci.

Prize money from the Shoot-out will be donated to the celebrity's favorite charity. The $5000 that Vorobiov won with his writing excellence will be divided among other deserving college-bound Carmel High seniors, chosen by the school.

DIVORCE

ers, defrauding the IRS by hiding cash in boxes under the house. Carmel police were called twice, both times the husband was taken off to jail. Mario, never convicted, was humiliated in front of his friends, his co-workers and his boss. He had a heart attack.

"The doctor say don't go work so much," he told the judge with his strong Italian accent. "Till last year no vacation, no holiday, most seven days work. The stress last nine months my health go down. I still work six days, to pay the legal fees."

He made his own accusations to The Pine Cone: His wife is an alcoholic with a gambling problem and mental illness. He says she tried to get revenge by ruining his reputation in Carmel. "She call my boss at 4 in the morning. She call my restaurant 40 time a night. She call my family in Italy and say many bad things. She cancel my medical insurance policy when I got sick."

The wife threw her husband out and was later herself evicted. She hired four different lawyers to work on her divorce and to find evidence that Mario was hiding money, stealing from restaurants, cheating on his taxes and abusing her. Some of the lawyers she fired. "Some fired me," she said, "but they were all either crooked or incompetent." They all sent bills, $16,000 worth so far.

"My husband doesn't believe in divorce," she told The Pine Cone. "He has pushed me to the edge of destitution so I would have to go back to him."

This is a trial?

The whole mess ended up in Judge Curtis' lap on Tuesday. Mario with his lawyer and Sharon representing herself. "I don't have any money left for an attorney, and my husband has hidden a million dollars!" she said.

"What evidence do you have to show me?" asked the judge over and over, trying to explain the difference between admissible evidence and a tale of woe. For two hours, she shuffled through her papers, unable to locate anything substantial. It was painful to watch, like some grinding income tax audit against a person with a shoe box full of receipts — from the wrong year. "This is very difficult, I'm obviously unprepared," she admitted.

When she started testifying about filing false tax returns during their marriage, the judge warned her that she could bring liability down on herself by saying such things in open court. "But I am the innocent one!" she said, and went on. Every admonishment to stick to documented facts was met with apologies and another tale of woe.

At one point, when she reached into her suitcase, the bailiff rushed toward her. A few in the audience tittered. "You may think this is funny!" thundered the judge, explaining that emotions run so high in divorce cases that there is real danger. "Sometimes they pull out a gun."

But Sharon had neither a weapon nor any admissible evidence in her hand.

Finally Judge Curtis threw up his hands. "I will give you two hours to get your case in order," he said, telling her to find a copy machine and duplicate any documents showing her husband's actual income, and any hidden assets that could be divided by the court.

At 1:30 she returned with four papers, one of them in her handwriting, and none of them compelling evidence of any hidden fortune.

After three more hours — which included cross-examination by Mario's lawyer who questioned her about gambling, harassing phone calls, removing money from her son's trust account and not applying for a job — it was over.

A divorce is simple

In California, all you need to get a divorce is proof that you've lived here for a year, and a statement that at least one of the spouses has "irreconcilable differences."

But simple divorces, even ones with no minor children and meager assets, are seldom easy. "Divorce is like death," said Judge Curtis from the bench. "There is anger, sorrow, self-pity and grief."

He told Sharon that what she really wanted was for the court to say who was right and who was wrong, who was responsible for ruining their marriage. "That I cannot do," he said.

He called the attorney's fees "outrageous" and said, "I don't think I've ever participated in a case where this many lawyers have gotten involved. This divorce should have been handled in half an hour." Since lawyers got most of the cash community property, there was very little of value for the judge to divide.

He was left looking at two damaged, very sad people.

"The teacup is broken," Curtis said. "So walk away from it."

Police to answer questions about child stalkers

AN INFORMAL meeting has been scheduled for 3 p.m. Friday, January 23, at Carmel River School Library regarding the recent reports of child harassment in the Carmel area.

Representatives from the Carmel Police Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's office will provide information and answer questions. The meeting is open to the public.

customer had dropped a package of garlic powder into the street, creating a flavorful mess.

If it had been a real emergency, Carmel's firefighters would have had to isolate the area. Instead, they just needed to find someone with a broom.

When the powder didn't react with the water on the street, officers thought it was a good sign that it would be OK to get close enough to take a whiff.

"I don't think there are any hazardous materials off the top of my head that smell like garlic powder," said Mitch Kastros, captain at the Carmel Fire Department.

this time we don't know exactly what it was," said Enhert.

Physicians have taken samples from patients at both CHOMP and Salinas Valley Memorial, but the results determining what the illness is will not be in until next month.

Enhert said that young children, the elderly and those with chronic health problems were most affected by the outbreak, and that Southern California was hit even harder because it has a lot of tourists and is a hot-bed of new diseases.

"There are a couple hundred viruses that can produce an upper-respiratory infection," she said. "A lot of the spread would be reduced if people stayed home. The big problem is that people who are ill do not stay home. They continue to go to work, they continue to go to school . . . we're really big into hand-washing. Good hygiene is the really the biggest protective action you can take."

mile Highway 101 bypass in Prunedale.

"We are not doing this just to be cranky," Hydorn said. "We are trying to keep this issue alive."

Besides obviously wanting to stop the Hatton Canyon Freeway, the basis for transfering its funding is to "save lives on the dangerous stretch of 101 near Prunedale." The resolution says the Hatton freeway is for "congestion management, not safety."

Hydorn said the impending retirement of Supervisor Tom Perkins, a strong Hatton Parkway supporter who also serves on TAMC, could cause a power shift.

The money transfer resolution approved by the council matched one passed late last year by the Pacific Grove City Council. The City of Monterey voted no.

In casting his "no" vote, Fischer said, "Once we give away this money, it's gone."

During the public hearing, Carmel resident Denny Gambill, who said he would support the right freeway design but not the current model, called the first resolution "an obstructionist move"

Shirley Humann, representing the Carmel Residents Association, supported the resolutions, echoing that group's opposition to the freeway.

Responding to the resolution, Lois Starnes, founding member of the pro-freeway Citizens for Hatton Canyon, said, "I don't believe that TAMC will accept this. TAMC has voted on this. The resolution doesn't change the overall situation."

Willett unharmed in hit 'n' run

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE WHITE-haired demon driver was so impatient to cross Ocean Avenue that he hit Carmel's Assistant Fire Chief John Willett in the crosswalk early Tuesday afternoon.

After Willett rolled off the hood of the car and tried to steady himself, he watched in disbelief as the white car sped away. "I think he was just as stunned as I was," Willett said of hit-and-run driver, whom he described as a 50- to 70- year-old man driving a white Mazda or Toyota. The man reportedly threw up his arms either in resignation or in some kind of gesture of apology before disappearing onto Dolores. "I was surprised that he kept going," Willett said.

Willett, who wasn't seriously injured, managed to jot down a license plate number on his hand. The owners are being contacted.

Spring might be around the corner, but El Niño hasn't blown over yet.

This might be one of the wettest and stormiest winters ever in California. Which is why we're offering preparation tips for any power outages storms may cause before spring comes. After all, just because El Niño means "the child" doesn't mean you should treat it with kid gloves.

➢For your family's safety, be sure everyone knows not to go near a power line that's been knocked to the ground. If you see one, stay away from it and call PG&E. ➢Keep a flashlight with fresh batteries in a spot that's easy to reach in the dark. ➢Have a working portable radio around in case a storm knocks power out. If it does, turn to the major news stations in your area to get information on the extent and length of the outage. ➢Ensure against food spoilage by freezing plastic soda bottles filled with water now, then transferring them to the refrigerator during an outage. ➢Check our web site at www.pge.com for more information.

Bates Carmel Cafe a favorite for cartoonist's fans, locals

By TAMARA GRIPPI

PEOPLE WHO love the Carmel flavor of Bill Bates' sketches now have a way to meet the cartoonist himself while sampling the breakfast and lunch dishes at the new Bates Carmel Cafe.

He and his wife Lei Lei recently opened their cafe on Mission St. — a place they are gearing to locals.

Open from 7 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., the restaurant serves lunch and "breakfast all day."

Lei Lei, a gourmet cook, makes the marmalade and strawberry jam for all the tables and whips up her special recipe for scones.

Sixteen classic Bates cartoons adorn the walls.

"A lot of the people who've seen the cartoons over the years are coming in," Bates said.

On the children's menu, Bates even provides some tips to future cartoonists. On the front of the menu, kids can color a favorite Bates cartoon — the one that depicts a Carmel woman asking her relations, "How come you never came to see me when I lived in Torrance?"

And on the back of the kiddies menu, Bates shares his secret of how to draw a Carmel cottage in six steps.

Bates' Carmel Cafe is on the west side of Mission between Fifth and Sixth, where Carmel Cafe used to be.

Bates says the locals are flocking back. Many have told him they're grateful to have an affordable restaurant to call home. "It's becoming a gathering place," he said.

Enjoy full Life Care retirement living in Pacific Grove.

Retirement living hasn't slowed down Don and Irene Slaiter. Both say they're as active today as they were during their careers. As volunteer docents for Bay Net, they support their love of marine life on the Monterey Peninsula and share their knowledge with others at Coast Guard Pier and Lover's Point near their home at Canterbury Woods.

Don and Irene enjoy good food and friends in the gracious and open dining room at Canterbury Woods.

Don and Irene also find the time and energy to be certified American Red Cross volunteers, ready to accept a call for help anytime they're needed.

When not volunteering, Don takes golf lessons and enjoys line dancing with Irene and other Canterbury Woods residents.

"We're so lucky," says Irene, "and so happy to be living here in comfort with so many other active and interesting people. We feel secure in knowing that at our home at Canterbury Woods we're guaranteed comprehensive lifetime medical care."

Both branches of the library will reopen Wednesday at 10 a.m.

Coffee Break

By BEVERLY BORGMAN

THE GREAT FORT ORD MYSTERY

COLUMNISTS RARELY plead ignorance, but I'm raising my hand right now to confess that the whole Fort Ord reuse plan is a great mystery to me.

How many years has it been? Five? Seven? Eight? Still, when distant friends ask, "What's happened with Fort Ord?" I clear my throat, stall, and say, "I know there's a university out there, that the two golf courses (which I've never seen) are open to the public.

"I know that some of the old housing is occupied, and some is — I can see it from Highway 1. And from the long gray stories in the daily newspaper, I think the cities adjacent to the base are arguing over, well, just about everything."

So, after all this time, it seemed a good idea to go out for a personal inspection. My good buddy Dave said he'd come along too.

Bottom line: I don't really know any more about today's Fort Ord than before our visit, but I wasn't prepared for the feeling I had as we drove in that main gate.

"It's been 43 years!" I gasp.

The guardhouse is empty. A few printed signs point to the university and the commissary. It all seems eerily uninhabited this gray, drizzly day, a far cry from the frenetic activity that I remember.

I laugh, remembering how one day in 1954 I'd had to drive my Private First Class husband to work, then couldn't find my way out with all the one-way streets. Finally, in desperation, I'd purposely gone the wrong way, stopping only at the request of an MP who inquired, "What do you think you're doing?"

Then he'd gently directed me to the exit.

On this January day in 1998 we make a left turn, driving down a long street of deserted buildings with signs that read "Machine Shop," "Laundry," etc.

Weeds three feet tall grow out of the pavement.

"It reminds me of "On the Beach," says Dave, remembering the old film about the world's nuclear end.

Just as we are feeling like Earth's last survivors, we come upon the buildings of CSUMB. This unwieldy grouping of letters stands for California State University Monterey Bay. A number of cars are parked outside the small administration building, but once again, we see no people.

We make a turn and Dave, whose handicap at the moment is 16, volunteers to show me the two golf courses constructed during the Korean War — Bayonet and Black Horse.

"Bourbon Bob" McClure had them built as practice for his engineers," he tells me with a chuckle.

This is news to me. At that time I lived just a few sand dunes down the road at Ord Village, a cluster of barracks converted to family use, and General McClure, then commander of the post, never invited my draftee husband to play a round.

Immense property

The more we see of the fort, the more I realize how immense is this property, and what a small portion of it I saw as an Army wife. I worked as an ad-taker at the Monterey Peninsula Herald in the old stone building at Washington and Pearl streets, now the site of Morgan's coffee house. In fact, I helped move files to the Herald's "new" building on Pacific Street that same year.

In a light rain, Dave and I head for home, postponing for another time a trip out to East Garrison which, as I understand it, is currently involved in a tug-of-war between police interests and an arts group.

There in 1954 I once joined my husband for a game of Hide-and-Seek with the other Supply Room "non-coms." I smile at the thought of me hiding in the dry grass as a couple of MPs cruised by on patrol.

It was, as Dickens put it, the best of times and the worst of times. We were young, happy and living in Paradise. Yet every month a levy came down, and a certain number of men went off to Korea, some never to return.

We drive out of what was once Fort Ord and now, for some strange reason, is called the Presidio of Monterey Annex (or P.O.M. on those confusing road signs). I close my eyes and can almost hear troops marching across the parade grounds to the shout of a Master Sergeant: "Hup, two, three, FOUR!"

No doubt about it. Whatever the eventual disposition of this old army base, there will always be a few ghosts left behind.

Bev welcomes your letters and comments at P. O. Box 4402, Carmel, CA 93921-4402.

OBITUARY

Nellabelle Dickey inspired others with her zest for living

By TAMARA GRIPPI

Nellie Scott Dickey caught a lot of attention when she bought a Chevy, painted it black and drove around asking famous athletes, actors and entertainers to sign their names on the car. She collected more than 100 signatures, including that of Ethel Barrymore.

THERE IS a 1932 photograph that shows a young Nellie Scott Dickey smiling self-confidently from the seat of her pride and joy — a black convertible Chevy adorned with every famous signature she could snare.

Nellabelle Dickey

Perhaps by today's standards, there may be more outrageous examples of Holywood flashiness (she went to school there). The athlete who signs his name with an explanation — "George Larson (swimming, Canada)" — may not seem so highly prized now. But Nellabelle was by any standard a colorful personallity.

With a fun loving spirit, she immersed herself in a whirlwind of work and recreation until the last day of her life.

Mrs. Dickey died in her Carmel home December 29. She was 84.

The former West Coast editor of House and Garden magazine, Mrs. Dickey moved to Carmel in 1992.

Busy volunteer

Before she even unpacked from her move, she joined the Carmel Foundation, becoming one of its busiest volunteers. She worked as a friendly visitor, hostess in the dining room and server at holiday dinners and at ice cream socials.

Mrs. Dickey was fond of saying, "I'd rather wear out than rust out."

Even on the last day of her life, she'd been busy in her kitchen gathering up utensils to help someone with a turkey dinner.

Born in El Paso in 1913, her mother created the name "Nellabelle" as a combination of her grandmother and aunt's names.

Mrs. Dickey attended Fresno public schools and Fresno State University. As a young woman, she moved to Los Angeles and attended Hollywood Junior College.

She caught a lot of attention when she bought the Chevy, painted it black and drove around asking famous athletes, actors and entertainers to sign their names right on the car. She collected over 100 signatures including stage and screen star Ethel Barrymore.

Mrs. Dickey's first job in Los Angeles,was setting up temporary shows at the California State Exposition Building in Los Angeles.

She worked as the West Coast editor for Living for Young Homemakers, which eventually became House and Garden Magazine.

Her editing career provided Mrs. Dickey with an exciting lifestyle. While working for House and Garden Magazine, she traveled all over the world on architectural assignments.

She held photo shoots in the homes of such rich and famous notables as John Wayne and Walter Matthau. Her younger brother Andrew Scott remembered that she'd often let him come along on a photo shoot and act as the grip.

"She'd love to go on shoots," Scott said. "It was pretty high-powered. The places were decorated to the 'nth' degree."

Thirty years apart in age, Mrs. Dickey was extremely close to her young brother, helping to raise him when he was orphaned. "She was my sister, my Auntie Mame and my mother, teaching me things for 50 years," Scott said.

Throughout her career, Mrs. Dickey also worked as the show room manager of the Pacific Design Center and wrote for the furnishing section of the Los Angeles Times.

An outgoing person, Mrs. Dickey stayed in touch with the friends she met over the years. "She never lost contact with anyone," Scott said.

Scott found "reams" of her addresses, including many schoolmates from Fresno High's class of 1931.

Mrs. Dickey's friends appreciated her upbeat attitude and optimistic approach to life.

"She had such a sense of humor," said friend Alizette Ryle of Carmel. "She had a feeling for the absurd and ridiculous qualities that life hands us."

"She was 'No Regrets Nellabelle,'" Scott said.

Mrs. Dickey is survived by her brother, Andrew W. Scott and her two nephews, Andrew and Brenndon.

Memorial contributions may be sent to the Carmel Foundation or the donor's favorite cause.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

What do you do if you are 82 and own 5,000 unspoiled Colorado acres? If you are Mildred "Tweet" Kimball, you virtually give it away to your county to preserve the land as a refuge for antelope, elk, bear and cougars--and keep it out of the hands of developers. Included was a herd of prize Santa Gertrudis cattle and Mildred's home, a replica of a 15th-century Scottish castle. While continuing to live there she transformed the castle into an educational center for appreciation of the environment and its wildlife.

George and Anna Smith have a simple formula for a lasting marriage: "Don't go to bed until you straighten out your disputes. Kiss and make up, and the next morning you're all right." They should know. The two first met in 1930 at a church choir practice. George offered to drive Anna home in his new car. They married two years later. Joining in celebrating their 65th wedding anniversary in Peekskill, New York, were three sons, two daughters, 18 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

a fish I'd give it to you," he promised.

Indeed the glum seal started looking more and more alert with his new friend around. When Miner started walking away up the beach, "Diggy" — as he was later named — followed Miner with his eyes and barked after him.

When SPCA officers arrived on the scene, they coaxed "Diggy" into a kennel and transferred him to the Moss Landing site of the Marine Mammal Center. Volunteers reported that the young bull seemed OK Tuesday — he'd been moving around a bit and "vocalizing."

Tuesday night, Diggy took a trip to the Sausalito Marine Mammal Center where he's having some blood tests done.

He had a week-old wound on his right flipper and was dehydrated. Diggy is being tube fed with electrolytes, while doctors are awaiting lab results. From the looks of Diggy's symptoms, he could be suffering from a parasite infection, according to Veterinary Technician Joan Sicree. So far, he's been holding his own at the mammal center, mostly resting.

It isn't rare for elephant seals to make an appearance in the Carmel area, according to Maia Carroll, spokeswoman for the Monterey County SPCA.

What's more unusual is that Diggy came up so far on well-traveled beach.

"These animals have a healthy fear of mankind," said Carroll. "For one of them to beach itself like this means it's sick."

Rob Cole, the SPCA officer who arrived on the scene, said the biggest priority was to get Diggy off the beach.

"At this point he's in a harassment situation," Cole said on the beach Tuesday morning. He asked people in the crowd that had gathered to back off.

Elephant seals are federally protected animals, Carroll said, noting that humans need to think as much about their own safety as that of the seals. Even if the seals appear to be lethargic, they are still capable of lunging forward and biting someone who might appear threatening.

However, in Diggy's case, more threatening than curious humans were the dogs who'd surely become excited at the sight of a lethargic sea lion sprawled out on the beach.

More than once during his two-hour vigil Tuesday morning, Miner had to wave away the dogs that wanted to get too close to Diggy.

Carroll said that the SPCA officers came to Diggy's aid as quickly as they could. The Monterey SPCA only has two officers handling all wildlife rescue and assistance calls in the county.

"We're fully loaded up every day on calls," Carroll said.

Carmel Police officers take their best shot on the playground behind the Mission in an organized tournament of kick-ball between themselves and the students and faculty of Junipero Serra School.

Junipero Serra students face off with Carmel Police Department

By KIERSTEN MCCUTCHAN

THE JUNIPERO Serra school this week had a face-off with the Carmel Police Department as the student council and faculty challenged the authorities to a game of kick-ball.

Principal Mary Machi said the battle ensued because this week is "Catholic Schools Week," when the private school celebrates the community's commitment to students by honoring a community organization in an event on "Spirit Day." "It's a partnership between the authorities and the school. This is the first year the students have played the Carmel Police Department."

The integrating of students and police in sport could not have come at a better time — police are still looking for a teen-ager in connection with harassing Carmel children. Machi believes the children can find faith and mentors in the Carmel Police Department. "These are people they can trust," she said. "People who care about them."

As The Pine Cone left the raucous tournament, Carmel PD was in the lead. Although, in this kind of game, there are no losers.

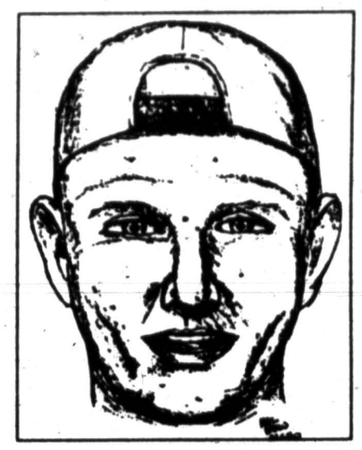
Monterey County Sheriff's Department.

The one boy depicted in the sketch is the suspect connected with the most serious incident, the January 9 report of attempted kidnapping on Mission Fields Road and Oliver Drive south of Carmel. The incident has been downgraded by sheriff's investigators to annoying or molesting a minor, Palmer said.



The sheriff's department composite sketch

In that incident, the suspect, further described as between 16 and 18 and wearing a ball cap backwards, allegedly offered the girl candy to entice her into the car.

Three of the five incidents took place within Carmel city limits. All five involve River School children.

The latest report came to the sheriff's department on January 17 and was the first involving a young boy. He said the teen offered him a ride in his car about three weeks ago.

Heightened alert

Parents and teachers at several local schools have been on a heightened alert, and Carmel police have stepped up patrol of bus stops and school yards.

Palmer suggested that the boy in the sketch may be the ringleader for a group of joyriders. "These might be, to quote a television show, boys behaving badly," Palmer said. "I don't think they are there to sneak out and steal away these kids."

Poitras said there is not enough information to form any definite conclusions about the teens' motives. "Although no child has been touched, molested or chased, we are treating this as a serious problem," he said.

Poitras said he has followed leads, mainly from anonymous tipsters, but they have not led to a breakthrough. He said he eliminated as a possible suspect a Pacific Grove teenager who happened to resemble the composite portrait.

Palmer said it is his "gut feeling" the main culprit and his companions are from a Peninsula high school.

Locals raise money for long overdue repairs at Carmel High's tennis courts

By TAMARA GRIPPI

AFTER YEARS of putting up with Carmel High's "embarrassingly" worn-out and cracked tennis courts, locals are stepping forward to raise money to get the courts back in respectable shape.

Charlotte Elliott, a Carmel resident who uses the tennis courts on weekends, announced that she and 10 members of her tennis group are willing to commit $100 each. One woman is even willing to contribute $1,000.

"There are a lot of locals who play there," Elliott said. "So many people use it that it seems a shame to wait all these years before doing anything."

Dennis Shepherd, the owner of Carmel Valley Racquet and Health Club, is also organizing a fund raising effort that he hopes will draw in the community and include Elliott and her group.

The Carmel Unified School District has already committed $30,000 in this year's budget to resurface the tennis courts, according to Superintendent Joe Jaconette. The total cost to redo the tennis courts at the high school is closer to $55,000.

"Twenty-five thousand dollars is a very attainable goal for us," Shepherd said, noting that the repairs are long overdue. "They were as bad as this 22 years ago," Shepherd said.

Dave Chaney, the tennis coach at the high school is frustrated that nothing has been done about the heavily cracked courts.

When a tennis ball hits a crack, it goes straight up in the air, he explained. Competing on the courts is "tough," Chaney said. "We call it the home court advantage."

For the last five years, Chaney has asked the district to do something. Unfortunately more pressing needs, such as leaky roofs and broken heaters, have gobbled up the capital improvement funds, according to Jaconette.

Carmel High's tennis coach Dave Chaney wonders how much longer his players will be able to put up with the cracked courts.

"The courts are so costly to do, that over the years there hasn't been enough in the budget available," Jaconette said.

A few months ago, Judy Long, director of business services for the district and Carmel High Principal Eric Paulson recently applied for a California Interscholastic Federation grant that was tailored toward schools that share their facilities with the community.

District officials hoped that the grant would be their answer. A few years back, a matching grant enabled the district to put in a new track at the high school, a project that totaled a couple hundred thousand dollars.

The district recently found out that the grant has been rejected.

At this point, patching or painting isn't enough for the courts. Instead, major reconstruction is in order, Shepherd said. The courts need a new layer of asphalt as well as a protective coating to prevent cracks in the future.

Chaney doesn't even want to imagine what will happen if his players have to wait too much longer for the courts to be redone.

"One of these days a team will show up and say 'sorry we're not playing,'" he said.

Council seat would raise her community service to next level

HOPING TO take her community service to "the next step up," Cultural Commissioner Carolyn Hardy has entered the at-large city council race that already includes Sue McCloud, Frank Wasko and incumbent Paula Hazdovac.

Carolyn Hardy

Because there are two seats open in the April municipal election, at least one of the challengers will be elected to a four-year term. Bob Fischer is not seeking a fourth term.

"Being in politics isn't a comfortable thing for me, but serving on the council is the way to take my volunteer service to a higher level," Hardy said.

Hardy, who joined the cultural commission in January 1997, said she has a "slight advantage" over the other candidates on the issue of the Sunset Center redevelopment plan. She believes the issue may be the most significant that the council will face in 1998, if not over the next three to five years.

Hardy "is not sure" whether it is possible to find the compromise project now being sought by the private fundraising group, Sunset Center for the Arts. Such a compromise strives to create a state-of-the-art theater inside, while not changing the

White 'honored' to be unopposed

CARMEL MAYOR Ken White said he is "honored" and "somewhat surprised" that no one has filed to oppose him in his fourth bid for mayor.

White, first elected to the office in 1992, will be the first Carmel mayor to serve four consecutive two year terms.

The filing period for mayor closed at 5 p.m. Friday, January 16. The mayor said he expected someone to take out papers, find the necessary 20 signatures of registered voters and file them at the last-minute — which is often the case.

Carmel Mayor Horace Lyon served three consecutive terms from 1952 to 1958. Barney Laiolo served three terms, two from 1968 to 1972 and one from 1980 to 1982. Laiolo lost to White in 1992.

Elective offices in Carmel have no term limits.

White ran unopposed in 1994. In 1996, he defeated challenger Frank Perry.

CHS grad moves to runoff election for congressional seat

BACK IN June 1994, the revelation struck Tom Bordonaro, then candidate for Assembly, as a beautiful piece of symbolism: The Assembly building was not handicap-accessible.

If Sacramento was ready for a quadriplegic assemblyman, it was more in theory than in reality.

Tom Bordonaro

At that point in '94, Bordonaro had run away with the GOP victory in the primary for the San Luis Obispo-area Assembly seat. Then-Speaker Willie Brown, concerned about impending embarrassment should Bordonaro win in his November runoff, pushed through $300,000 in retrofits.

In November, Bordonaro won the 33rd Assembly District, and, yes, the building was ready for his arrival. If the rest is history, there are unfinished chapters. He has served two straight Assembly terms, and is now making a run for Congress.

"Brown knew how to get away from bad press," Bordonaro reflects.

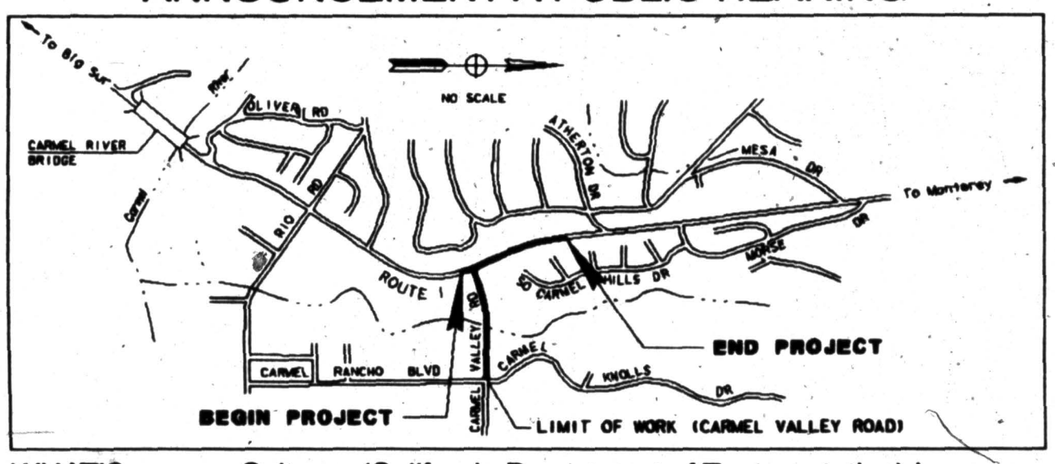
PUBLIC NOTICE

INITIAL STUDY/ENVIRONMENTAL ASSESSMENT AVAILABLE ANNOUNCEMENT A PUBLIC HEARING



WHAT'S BEING PLANNED

Caltrans (California Department of Transportation) is proposing to add a second right-turn lane from Carmel Valley Road to Highway1 (Post Mile 72.9), just east of the City of Carmel-By-The-Sea in Monterey County. The project will provide a minor short-term improvement to meet the objectives of the Monterey County Congestion Management Plan and will serve as an interim measure until a long-term transportation improvement can be completed consistent with the Monterey County Regional Transportation Improvement Program. The proposed work will encroach upon approximately 85 square meters (915 square feet) of wetlands. The project is being evaluated to ensure that all practical measures are taken to minimize harm to the wetlands.

WHY THIS AD

Caltrans has studied the effects this project may have on the environment. Our studies show it will not significantly affect the quality of the environment. The report that explains the study is called the Initial Study/Environmental Assessment (IS/EA) . This notice is to inform you that the IS/EA is available for you to read. A hearing will be held to give you an opportunity to talk about certain design features with Caltrans; staff. The findings of the IS/EA and the tentative construction schedule will be discussed.

WHAT'S AVAILABLE

You can review or obtain a copy of the IS/EA, project maps, and other information at Caltrans District Office - 50 Higuera Street, San Luis Obispo on weekdays from 7:30 am to 4:30 pm. The IS/EA is also available for review at the following locations during normal business hours:

Harrison Memorial Library
Mission & 6th Avenue
Carmel, CA 93921

Monterey County Library
Carmel Valley Branch
65 W. Carmel Valley Road
Carmel Valley, CA 93924

WHERE YOU COME IN

Caltrans is providing an opportunity for you to review and comment on the proposed projects and the findings of the IS/EA. All comments on the IS/EA postmarked by March 6, 1998 will be included in the final environmental document. Your comments should be sent to: Gary Ruggerone, Environmental Planning Branch, Caltrans District 5, 50 Higuera Street, San Luis Obispo, CA 93401.

WHEN & WHERE

A Public Hearing will be held on Monday, February 23, 1998 from 6:00 pm to 8:00 pm at the Sunset Cultural Center, Carpenter Hall (San Carlos Street between 8th and 9th Avenues in the City of Carmel-By-The-Sea). Individuals who require special accommodation (American Sign language interpreter, accessible seating, documentation in alternate formats, etc.) should contact the District 5 Public Affairs Office (805) 549-3318 at least 21 days prior to the scheduled meeting date. TDD users may contact the California Relay Service TDD line at 1-800-735-2929 or Voice Line at 1-800-735-2922.

CONTACT

For more information on this project, please contact: Steve DiGrazia, Project Manager, Caltrans District 5, 50 Higuera Street, San Luis Obispo 93401-5415; Telephone (805) 549-3437.

What the Coastal Commission really did with the Hearst Resort

"Hearst denied" and "Hearst resort shot down" screamed the headlines last week.

Hold on a second. The Coastal Commission's action — taken after a mammoth public hearing last week in San Luis Obispo — included the go-ahead for Hearst to build an upscale, 375-room oceanfront hotel (more than double the size of the Lodge at Pebble Beach) on San Simeon Point. That fact has been largely overlooked amid all the whoop-de-doo over the 'defeat' of Hearst.

The commission did vote down a coastal land use plan amendment from San Luis Obispo County that included several other Hearst development projects — a golf course next to San Simeon Point, a second hotel just downhill from the Hearst Castle Visitor's Center, and a third hotel in the pine forest a few miles down Highway 1.

But overlooked in virtually all news stories about the Coastal Commission's vote is the fact that the vote was without legal significance. Why? Because the Hearst plans had already been approved by the Coastal Commission in 1983 and again in 1988. (Hearst's lawyer summed-up the situation succinctly when he told the commission that the existing plan "has not been revoked, rescinded or died of old age.")

Once the Commission okays a land use plan it has no way to reverse that approval without the agreement of the local government. The San Luis Obispo County Board of Supervisors continues to approve the various Hearst plans, just like it has for more than fifteen years, and there are no indications it will change its mind in the near future.

Thus, the commission renewed its approval of a resort hotel at San Simeon Point and left intact existing plans which the county and the commission have previously concurred were a good idea for Northern San Luis Obispo County — including the golf course and all hotels listed above.

Many of those in the fervently anti-Hearst camp at the hearing seemed blithely unaware what the commission's action might mean. Several admitted that they didn't understand that approval of a 375-room hotel on the west side of Highway 1 was a vital part of the action they demanded the commission take.

Monterey Coastal Commissioner David Armanasco was practically the only participant who even took note of the location and size of the hotel that the commission was about to approve again. He made an impassioned speech about moving the hotel to the inland side of the Highway 1. But his voice went unheeded.

There are many obstacles still in the way of the actual start of construction by Hearst. But it is crystal clear now that at least one big hotel will soon become part of the San Simeon landscape. Not only that, but Hearst can ignore the commission's action last week and start submitting permit applications for all the projects in the existing land use plans. The commission's vote has no effect on Hearst's ability to do so. And since San Luis Obispo County and the Coastal Commission are obligated to adhere to a legally-certified land use plan, much of what Hearst wants seems likely to eventually be approved.

All that celebrating over the 'defeat' of Hearst is, to put it mildly, premature.

'Life in Carmel is devoid of exceptions'

Dear Editor:

The basis given for rejection of a business license for displaying my paintings is that the Planning Commission of Carmel must adhere to the rule rather than making an exception. Thus life in Carmel is devoid of exceptions. Then, there was little reason for even conducting a hearing. My November 11, 1997 letter to the Planning Commission which appeals to the Commission for reasons never received a response.

I am grateful for the dissenting comment made by Commissioner Pope Coleman. Before the "rules," adherence has already abrogated one's power to act when the rules are designed to extinguish one's wish by forbiding it. It is extinguished.

'False impression'

Dear Editor:

Paul Wolf's article in the January 16 Pine Cone regarding the listing of Sunset Center on the State and National Historic Registers might convey a false impression that the two women, Enid Sales and Lois Roberts, who nominated the building for these listings, are residents of Carmel-by-the-Sea. This is not true.

Neither Sales nor Roberts lives in the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea. Both live outside the city limits. Doesn't it seem ironic that two people who are not voters in or residents of Carmel-by-the-Sea would, on their own, change the status of a city owned building without even bothering to notify the city?

remembers a rare visit to the state Senate building to present a bill in committee. They had no ramp or other accommodations for him. Bordonaro was unable to approach the dais and had to present his bill from the audience.

To this day he can't overlook the irony of the government needing an outside spur to comply with handicap requirements.

Apart from such tales, Bordonaro, now 38, explains that his disability, the result of a 1977 car accident, has been a negligible factor in his public life.

Bordonaro, now a Paso Robles resident, faces Lois Capps, who went unchallenged in the January 13 Democratic primary. She is the widow of Walter Capps, the former 22nd Congressional District Representative who died late last year, thus necessitating a special election March 10.

In the primary, Bordonaro, a conservative Republican, defied predictions by beating two GOP contenders, most notably, Brooks Firestone, who spent nearly $1 million to his $200,000 in the primary.

With that challenge out of the way, Bordonaro surveys a district — all of San Luis Obispo County and most of Santa Barbara County — that favors his party in registered voters by about 1,000.

Unfortunately for Bordonaro, even if he is sent to Washington March 10, he will have to defend his congressional spot with elections in June and November. (Special elections only settle partial terms.) Should he lose in the March 10 runoff, he will also lose a job in the Assembly, since the Assembly's filing deadline is March 6. By all appearances, he accepts the calculated risk without much apprehension.

Bordonaro doesn't come across as inclined toward heavy partisan warfare. He would rather talk about taxes and education than campaigning or his disability.

Without a hint of sentimentality or self-congratulations, Bordonaro remarks: "If I've served as a role model, I have done so without trying to be one."

outside of the federally-listed historic building. Hardy was not yet on the commission in late 1996 when it voted unanimously to tear down Sunset, and replace it with the leading design. Thus she has no pro-demolition position to defend.

Hardy, a self-employed interior decorator, and her husband, Cavan Hardy, now a retired attorney, moved to Carmel in 1986.

Her community service contributions have included foreman of the 1993 Monterey County Civil Grand Jury, on the board of the United Way and president of the Junior League of Monterey County.

Hardy, a visitor to Carmel for about 15 years before she moved here, said she and her husband gained insight into the local government process when they built their Carmel house in 1987.

Originally, they wanted to renovate and remodel their property, near the Forest Theater on Guadalupe, but the house was found to be "not salvageable." They learned about the trials and tribulations of going through the application process, and even endured a three-month delay from the water district over their water permit.

Hardy has incubated the idea of running for council for some time: "I was thinking about it for the distant future, but I decided I wanted to see Sunset through to fruition."

'Speedy trial' not in the cards for flood lawsuit

By KIRSTIE WILDE

NINE THOUSAND pages of documents have already been amassed in the Mission Fields flood lawsuit, and the nine lawyers haven't even finished more than 7,000 written 'interrogatories' that must be answered, copied and added to the growing mountain of evidence. It is clear that there will be no "speedy trial" in the case, and some of the frustration over delays was apparent in Superior Court on Jan. 20.

Judge William Curtis said the case was "out of control" and vowed to "do whatever it takes to get it back on track." He also told the Los Angeles attorneys who filed the suit to be in his court at 9:30 on Jan. 30, and if the other parties were not available until afternoon, "You can sit and wait."

Attorney Joyce Mendlin and her partner have twice scheduled themselves to be in two places at the same time — the Orange County and Monterey County courthouses — and then begged off on appearing here.

That meant all the entities sued in the flood case: The Monterey County Offices of Emergency Services, Public Works, Water Resources, and the Sheriff; the Carmel Area Wastewater District, City of Carmel, State Parks, Carmel River Inn, the Odello brothers and the Odello Family Trust had to reschedule their lawyers for new court dates twice.

There are more than 100 Mission Fields residents who signed on with Mendlin's L.A. firm to sue over the two devastating floods of 1995 which severely damaged their homes. There were very hard feelings when the Odello family, whose artichoke farm was purposely flooded by authorities to save Mission Fields houses, was also sued by the neighbors for damages.

Vincent Hurley, attorney for the Carmel Wastewater District, is frustrated at the slow pace. "Our goal was to do everything possible to get the matter to trial on a fast track, and were upset at the delays and the hundreds of interrogatories that were irrelevant to the agencies who received them."

The State Lands Commission has now been added as a defendant in the case, because "decades ago," Hurley said, "the commission wrote a letter saying 'we own the Carmel River.'"

Judge Curtis said he intends to bring the suit to trial by September.

Monterey County Symphony shortens list of conductor candidates

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

In a lengthy selection process, seven Monterey County Symphony music director applicants will be guest conductors for one concert each next season — vying for the coveted post which will be left vacant by long-time conductor/director Clark Suttle.

Suttle, ninth music director and conductor of the symphony who began in 1985 at the outset of the 40th concert season, will "wind up here at the end of the current season," according to Walter J. McCarthy.

At a press conference Wednesday morning called by McCarthy — chairman of the music director search committee — names of the seven finalists were announced.

■ Symphony review: See page 7B

One hundred and ninety-eight applications for the post were received from all over the world after the opening was announced in the professional press nationally and internationally almost a year ago, McCarthy said in an interview with The Pine Cone last week.

"The musical world is a relatively small world," McCarthy said. "Word gets out.

"We received mountains of materials from applicants that had to be organized, to be put into folders by each applicant's name. Reviewing their qualifications took many days," he said, referring to the almost daunting work that faced his search committee of nine — comprised of five members of the board of directors, and four members of the orchestra.

"When we boiled down the applications to a manageable number, we listened to their audio and video tapes. This took many more hours and days of careful work, trying to sort out the better from the good." McCarthy said.

"We finally came down to a dozen or so, and from these, seven applicants have been invited to conduct one concert each next season — which will be the 53rd season — in programs selected to display the guest conductors' abilities.

"The first will be Dmitry Yablonsky, who will begin the

IS IT HER ESTROGEN therapy or the daily runs on Carmel Beach since she was a wee whelp that allow 10-year-old Gretchen to be fetchin', even when soaked to the skin in a dripping, electric blue sweater?

During Monday's downpour, Gretchen Ditzler was one soggy doggy — so much so, that after her rainy romp on the beach, her Mom Susan took pity, and carried Gretchen, under an umbrella, back to the car parked on Scenic. Gretchen seemed to enjoy the special attention.

According to her mom, Gretchen — a miniature schnauzer — is in touch with people's feelings — the kind of dog "who curls up with you when you're sick."

Playful, yet tender, Gretchen helped baby-sit 10-month-old niece Madeline when Madeline was brought to the beach for the first time last week. Gretchen showed baby Madeline the ropes of playing in the sand and not crawling too near the water.

Bach Festival brings 'Brilliant Music' to Carmel Mission Basilica next Thursday

What was begun as "a little treat" off season in private homes for the inner circle of Carmel Bach Festival major donors — little evenings of music by festival musicians who were passing through the area — will now be open to the public, and for an affordable $10.

According to Nana Faridany, artistic manager of the festival, "Brilliant Music for Soprano, Trumpet and Organ" will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 29, in the Carmel Mission Basilica, with advance ticket reservations being taken by telephone.

"In years gone by, the patrons had always said that they missed the festival in the winter months and would like to see off season events," Faridany told The Pine Cone this week. "And so we told the festival artists if they knew they were going to have an engagement on the West Coast, to contact me and we would work out something. That's how the inner circle events began, and they became bonding experiences for both patrons and artists. Now the concerts are open to the public in a public venue."

Wolfgang Basch

In the upcoming evening of music, Rosa Lamoreaux, soprano, Wolfgang Basch, trumpet and Daniel Lockert, organ, will perform together in "Su la cetra amorosa" by Tarquinio Merula and "Con Battaglia" from "Il giardino d'Amore" by Alessandro Scarlatti.

Organ solos by Lockert will include "Canzona" by Andrea Gabrieli; "Prelude, Fugue and Chaconne" by Dietrich Buxtehude; and

A perceptive look at the Wilde life of Oscar

By PATRICK WHITEHURST

THEATER REVIEW

MORGAN STOCK and Cary Crockett's premiere theatrical adaptation of the life of Oscar Wilde acquaints us with that Irish prodigy, prolific writer and pretentious man-of-the-world. Theirs is an amused detachment and at the same time a sensitive sense of the deep tragedy that entered Wilde's life and surrounded him until the end of his writing career and until his death.

Wilde's passion for colorful dress and mannerisms, the luxury with which he surrounded himself, and the elegance of the era are discerningly detailed in Unicorn Theatre's current production, "Wilde About Oscar."

Without sensationalism and free of moral judgment, Morgan Stock presents this vainglorious man with sympathetic appreciation and with a shrewd understanding of Wilde's extravagances, his wit and his genius. His is a difficult task that is brought to the stage with an outstanding cast featuring Carey Crockett as Oscar Wilde.

Act one introduces us to Wilde and his illustrious and often notorious friends at the peak of his popularity and at a time when he and his works were bordering on infamy in Victorian London. Crockett not only does a superb job in the role of Wilde but also resembles Wilde as captured in the line drawings by Toulouse-Lautrec.

For that matter, Robert Colter as the painter James Whistler, looks remarkably like the caricatures by Aubrey Beardsley and others that appeared in Punch Magazine at the time. Mr. Colter portrays Whistler with the subtle, dry wit and the impudent ill-temper for which he was noted and is the perfect foil for Wilde's bombast in this production.

Striking resemblance

Wilde's disgrace and eventual ruin was the result of his affection for the young Lord Alfred Douglas, portrayed with a solid performance by Lucien Leutzinger. I doubt if it is a coincidence, but Leutzinger bears a striking resemblance to the real Lord Douglas in photographs taken of him in Naples, Italy.

Rob Foster as the Marquis of Queensbury (that's right, the same who introduced the rules of prize fighting) was appropriately sinister as the father of Lord Douglas. His "County Irish" accent was without flaw.

The strange relationship between Wilde and Lady Diana, who was with Wilde until his end, and played with grand regalness by Catherine Quinn, was perhaps the most difficult to understand.

One of the play's most touching scenes however, was in act two when Lady Diana visits Wilde in Paris after his imprisonment and self-imposed exile to France.

In the first scene of act two — the trial of Oscar Wilde — Peter Eberhardt demonstrates his fine acting ability as the Barrister, Mr. Edward Carson. We watch as Wilde, in his great vanity is more intent to be a witty observer of his own tragedy rather than the protagonist in his trial.

Ron Cohen, as the stuffy Lord Slumley, Jody Gilmore in dual roles as the man-servant Melville and as Mr. Bevin, and the rest of this fine cast are all given their opportunity on stage with wonderfully clever lines that the audience obviously enjoyed.

Certainly we could not forget the visual treat of Robyn Anne Nisbet as she seductively flaunts across the set as the maid-servant, Zadi.

When one studies the Unicorn's playbill it becomes obvious that the players are devoted to their theatre. Almost every member of the performing cast takes up additional jobs behind the scenes as members of the Technical Staff . . . and they do a great job.

One criticism

If there is any criticism at all, I must refer to the Barrister's wig. I'm sure somewhere there must be a better one.

But then again, a critic's opinion is as essential to theatre as ants to a picnic.

Congratulations, Unicorn Players . . . and thank you!

Art of drawing highlighted at Carl Cherry Center

Carmel Bach Festival baritone pinch-hits ably in S.F.

By LEQUITA VANCE-WATKINS

MUSIC REVIEW

IT IS the stuff of which high drama is made: the late Friday call from the West Coast to the East asking the young baritone to step in for an ailing star. The fast-flying calls across a continent nailing down each detail and working out flight schedules till well into the next morning, then the deal is sealed.

Well, it does happen for real. And when that long distance call came to Carmel Bach Festival favorite Christopheren Nomura, the answer was a deep "yes."

Early Sunday morning Nomura was well on his way west arriving in time to catch the 49ers game and make rehearsal for San Francisco Symphony's "Carmina burana" under the baton of Alasdair Neale at Davies Hall last week.

"Burana" is Carl Orff's major work and requires a large choral presence (this performance boasts 180 choristers, including the San Francisco Girls' Choir) as well as an extended orchestra featuring two pianos and celestas along with three vocal soloists. Of the three soloists, it is the baritone who has the largest role and Mr. Nomura, who has performed it previously for the Boston Symphony, was well prepared for the job. His reading gave no hint of the last moment arrangements for him to fill in for Metropolitan Opera's Dwayne Croft.

Nomura not only was up to the demands Orff set for his singers but surpassed them with great beauty end vocal ability. His was a performance that brought to their feet the audience who filled Davies Hall to the rafters for five performances.

Soprano Sumi Jo and tenor Stanford Olsen, both of the Met, performed with ringing success and verve: each nobly negotiating a "D" on the way.

Though the younger colleague filling in for the more seasoned singer is what fires excitement in the audience, it is a performance that writes the final chapter and for this tale the ending finds our fine baritone not only standing but as the hero.

BACH...

"Obra de Octavo Tono Alto" by Sebastian Aguilera de Heredia.

Trumpet and organ will combine to play "La Noce Champetre" by Jean Hotteterre, "Suite in D Major" by Jeremiah Clarke and "O ignis Spiritis" by Hildegard von Bingen.

Lamoreaux

Soprano and trumpet will perform a duet, "All' armi pensieri" by Alessandro Melani.

To reserve tickets, call the Carmel Bach Festival office at 624-2046 or 624-2788.

Checks should be made out to the Carmel Bach Festival and tickets will be sent by mail. Tickets also can be obtained from Room 11, Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. If not sold out, tickets will be available at the Mission Basilica door.

Weil conducts in Boston

Faridany also announced that in mid February, a trip to Boston is planned to see festival music director and conductor Bruno Weil in his premiere conducting appearance of the Boston Symphony.

Fifteen tickets have been purchased for the performance of Hayden, Mozart and Schubert. Several patrons and Bach Festival staff members will be attending, and any remaining tickets will be available to the general public.

Faridany said that although this is not a tour group, those purchasing tickets will sit together at the symphony and then attend a reception following the performance.

Tokyo String Quartet proves it can pack, and please, a crowd

By NATHALIE PLOTKIN

MUSIC REVIEW

THE CHAMBER Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula started the New Year most auspiciously by presenting the Tokyo String Quartet to a well-nigh capacity audience Jan. 8. At first, there were some reservations to be felt because first violinist Mikhail Kopelman was a new kid on the block (musically speaking, of course). He joined the Tokyo a year ago when the previous leader found it necessary to retire.

Kopelman, however, is a seasoned, experienced practitioner of the art of playing chamber music. His integration into the rarefied excellence of the Tokyo Quartet reputation sounded as if it were well on its way to being a very successful marriage. Violinist Kikuei Ikeda, violist Kazuhide Isomura and cellist Sadao Harada joined Kopelman in an eclectic, but interesting and off-beat program. There was late Haydn, early Webern and medium Tchaikovsky.

The greatest novelty of the evening was the exquisitely shaped and expertly conceived "Five Movements for String Quartet," Op. 5, by Anton Webern. One of his earliest atonal creations, it is a condensed and concentrated distillation of intricate tonal relationships. Each sound counts and in the 12 minute duration of the work, there simply weren't enough of them to be completely satisfying. I wanted to hear more. The playing was on an exalted plane. The fragility of the exploration of the unusual, almost pointillist musical tone painting, was masterful.

By comparison, Tchaikovsky's "String Quartet No. 3 in E-flat Minor," Op. 30, is a musically verbose composition which can only succeed in the hands of superior performers and interpreters. From the elegantly pleading quality of the opening "Andante," one understood that here would be an interpretation to revel in and so it was. During the expressive delicacy of a lengthy waltz-like movement which embodied a balletic quality at times, the volatile mood changes were sensitively synchronized.

A dark-sounding Scherzo led into the "Andante Funebre" written as a memorial for a colleague. Kopelman projected an emotive, passionately expressive role in this movement. This was a completely convincing and eminently memorable performance.

Dicterow reading of Beethoven draws polite applause

By LYN BRONSON

THE STORMY weather happened to be outside Sunset Center last Monday evening, as the Monterey County Symphony under the direction of Clark Suttle presented its third concert of the season.

Inside the hall there was relative calm as soloist Glenn Dicterow lead us through a rather placid and uninvolved reading of the "Beethoven Violin Concerto." Technically there was little to fault, for he obviously has the violinistic skills needed to surmount the concerto's difficulties, and his intonation was fine, especially in the difficult harmonics.

MUSIC REVIEW

Stale beer

But what was lacking was the soaring conviction of inevitable phrasing that often convinces a listener that the performance they are hearing represents the only way to play the work. In this concerto the violin part often decorates melodies in a remarkable way, but in this performance it somehow missed. In the slow movement Dicterow produced some fine playing, but in the final movement which can be an inspiring romp to its conclusion, it lacked energy and drive and ended up like a glass of stale beer. And the audience knew it, for there was no standing ovation, but instead rather polite applause.

After intermission we heard two lightweight works (it was sort of like listening to KBOQ): Joachim Turina's "Danzas fantásticas "and Copland's "El salón México." The three Turina pieces received energetic and professional performances under Suttle's direction and they provided an impressive showcase for members of the Monterey County Symphony.

Before the final Copland work, Mr. Suttle addressed the audience and said that not only was Copland inspired by a trip to Mexico to write this work, but Suttle himself was bringing the inspiration of one of his own trips to Mexico to this performance. Suttle reminisced about how Mariachi bands played a little out of tune, but after several drinks the players sounded better and better and the girls looked prettier and prettier. Suttle had advised members of the orchestra to emulate the spirit of Mariachi players and thus we had a little humor injected into the Copland not intended by the composer. "El salón México" sounds a little like "Billy the Kid" with hot sauce, but it received a rousing performance by the orchestra.

Louise Cuyler remembered

Mention must be made of the passing of Dr. Louise Cuyler who for many years has written very professional program notes for the Monterey County Symphony. A gentle woman with a tremendous store of knowledge about every facet of music, her notes always were a distinguished addition to Monterey County Symphony programs.

In the current program, the notes on the "Beethoven Concerto" were written by Dr. Cuyler while the remainder were written by Symphony Manager, Joseph Truskot. Mr. Truskot is to be congratulated for stepping into the breach at the last moment and providing us with the remainder of the notes. However, he needs to check his facts more carefully. Issac Albeniz was not a victim of the sinking of the Lusitania in 1915. In fact, he died in 1909 of Bright's disease. It was Enrique Granados who in 1915 went down with the steamship Sussex which was torpedoed in the English Channel by a German U-boat.

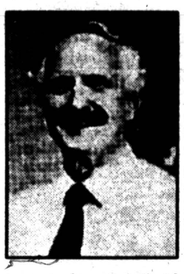
About...whales...and valentines...golf and such.

BASQUETIQUE

They're both around the corner - Valentine's Day and BASQUETIQUE. If you haven't discovered this new shop specializing in gift baskets, it's on the main floor of the Holman Building; and ready to give meaning to your February 14 fancies. Say "I love you" with attractive Couroc trays or baskets red and heart-shaped, filled with just about anything your heart desires - themes of romance, sports, gardens, foods, whatnot, and Valentine extras like heart-shaped stuffed animals and candles with hearts. It'll be beautifully wrapped and you will have made a statement! 542 Lighthouse, PG. 394-0767

Pieces of Heaven FINE CHOCOLATES

PIECES OF HEAVEN is doing it up chocolate, and I mean chocolate! Catching your eye first - almost too good to be true - irresistible chocolate heart-shaped boxes filled with truffles! Then there are angels, cupids, hearts in all sizes, even a 1/2 lb. "Kiss" wrapped in red foil! For that romantic, candlelit dinner, choose chocolate tulip shells to fill with ice cream or fruit. Ah, the chocolate here, at least 95% made on the premises, goes on and on, & for the next week or so, in the form of white or dark chocolate golf balls! For your convenience, a beautiful new store in downtown Monterey on Franklin near Alvarado (373-8633). The Barnyard, Carmel. 625-3368



Why not join the over 1800 customers on the peninsula who use THE BELMONT METHOD of carpet and upholstery cleaning and witness the vast difference yourself? During the past 48 years, Charles Belmont has exhibited his supreme talent as a master cleaner in over 15,000 homes. It appears, doesn't it, that he is more than qualified to serve your needs as well. Now you can have steam-free, soap-free, foam-free and odor-free cleaning for you special home furnishings. You're going to love FAVALORO's new restaurant in Pacific Grove - it's roomy, tasteful and strictly Italian! This family restaurant (Marie and her husband, Nino, are the chefs), is so genuine you feel you're eating in the Favaloro's lovely home in Sicily. Pasta is made fresh each day, and though they're known and loved for probably everything on the menu, one cannot top their "gnocchi" (!) seafood pasta and Tira Misu for dessert! Open for lunch - Tuesday through Saturday, dinner - Tuesday through Sunday. Beer and Italian wines available and prices, the kind that please! 542 Lighthouse, corner of Fountain, Pacific Grove. 373-8523

FAVALORO'S

RAINBOW SCENT CO. is moving...everything into its typically Carmel-by-the-Sea shop in downtown Carmel. Ellen's excited about having just one store, and being able to concentrate only on it. She extends her heartfelt thanks to all you loyal customers and hopes (expects!) to see you on Lincoln street (next to Carmel Bay Company) for all her fine bath and body products including Crabtree & Evelyn. Meantime, check out the SALE at the Barnyard location! She wishes you all a Happy 1998! 624-4422

TEMPEL'S

If you're looking for a floral centerpiece for your AT&T party, an unusual hostess gift or the quintessential valentine, TEMPEL'S of Carmel, will create it. This "extra service" florist has been serving the peninsula for 22 years, and Pat Tempel's passion for flowers and plants is contagious! She specializes in custom designs for home and clubroom, she's well-known for personalized flower gifts and her most attractive, unusual garden baskets! Whatever you choose - even a single rose or tulip, TEMPEL'S will fashion a piece of art. Adjacent to the Barnyard in Carmel Rancho Center. 624-5395.

They're migrating like mad these days - those great big wonderful grays, so it's time to make a date with SAM'S FISHING FLEET, INC. to go Whale Watching. December through March, Sam's ships depart each weekday and weekend for two hour trips at 11am and 1pm (the well-informed skipper narrates) and for three hour tours (marine biologist on board) at 10 am and 1:30 pm. Sam guarantees seeing whales on these cruises, so count on being completely transfixed over these magnificent creatures while learning much about them, as well. Call 372-0577 for rates and reservations and have a great time!

Shirley Loomis CALLIGRAPHER

When next you need invitations, placecards, wedding envelopes, certificates, special quote or poem (Valentine's Day?) - for that matter, anything that requires beautiful writing - call SHIRLEY LOOMIS, CALLIGRAPHER. Shirley does custom work in the calligraphy style of your choice and it's done by hand, not computer. Her business keeps her busy, so allow as much time as possible, but be assured she'll get your work done on time. Suggest you Clip and Save this for that time in the future you'll need her, or call now for an appointment. 625-2810

Prim & Proper

The Annual Fall and Winter Sale at PRIM & PROPER, the one everyone waits for, has just begun! You'll find 30% to 75% off dresses, pants, skirts and sweaters by such important fashion lines as Anuca, Cambridge Dry Goods, Susan Bristol, Sigrid Olsen, Gotcha Covered, Louben (cashmere blazers!), Emma James, Philippe Marques and some David Brooks. Needless to say, the sooner you arrive at this "Victorian on the Corner", the more you'll see, the more you'll have! And since spring fashions are arriving each day, cast your eyes on then as well! 533 Lighthouse, Pacific Grove. 372-5563

Chocoholics Synonymous

Traveling Gourmet

By Lotte Mendelsohn

If I were to make a list of the things I find completely irresistible, I know chocolate would be jockeying for first place along with the fuzz at the back of a newborn's neck, all kinds of baby animals and double cheese pizzas. I am, along with millions of others, an incurable "chocoholic."

Now we are true "-oholics", in that we will lie, hide the stuff, and wake up with the cold sweats longing for a candy bar fix.

Being analytical, there does seem to be one basic difference between those of us who are addicted to cacao bean by-products and other addicts. Quality and selectivity ARE important — no bargain substitutes for us! If milk chocolate is our pleasure, the dark Swiss variety won't do — and if the presently chic, white chocolate is what turns you on, no way will that yearning be satisfied by the big-brown-bar, American best-seller.

Don't be misled however, we chocoholics will eat almost anything that features our precious product. Calories and fat content be damned we say, we're only going to eat one cookie or bite or spoonful or one truffle, and so goes the self-delusionary monologue. What to do?

The recipes that follow guarantee to make the load of guilt a heavy one, but what the hey — when your scales belie your resolve, there are always this month's New Year resolutions — repeat after me, "I will not pig out on chocolate this year." Let me know if it's working!

Cinnamon Fudge Brownies

Makes 16 brownies

1/2 cup all-purpose flour
pinch of salt
1 1/2 tsp. ground cinnamon
1/3 cup unsalted butter
2 Tbsp. brewed coffee (can be made with instant)
1/2 cup plus 2 Tbsp. sugar
6 oz. high quality bittersweet chocolate (Lindt or Tobler) chopped coarsely
1 tsp. pure vanilla extract
2 large eggs
1/2 cup walnut pieces

1. Center a rack in the oven and preheat to 325 F. Butter an 8-inch square baking pan, flour the bottom, and tap out the excess. Set aside.

2. In a medium saucepan over direct heat, or in a bowl in a microwave, bring the butter, coffee and sugar just to the boil, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat, add the chopped chocolate, and stir with a small whisk until smooth. Stir in the vanilla and allow the mixture to cool for a minute or two.

3. Still working in the saucepan with the small whisk, beat in the eggs, one at time, until you have a thick, glossy batter. Switch to a rubber spatula and gradually stir in the reserved dry ingredients, stirring only until the flour is incorporated. Fold in the nuts and scrape the batter into the prepared pan.

4. Bake for 33-35 minutes, until the top is dry and crackly. Place the pan on a rack to cool for 10 minutes. Unmold the brownies onto a rack and then invert onto another rack to finish cooling to room temperature. When cool, cut the brownies into 16 two-inch squares.

Lindt Chocolate Torte

Easy, unbelievably rich and quite wonderful!

Serves 6-12 (depending on the size of slices you plan to serve)

5 three-oz. Lindt Surfin bars, finely chopped
8 oz. sweet butter, melted
4 large eggs
4 egg yolks
3 oz. (6 Tbsp.) sugar
whipped cream for garnish

1. Preheat oven to 425 F. Grease an 8-inch cake mold and flour dust it. Set aside.

2. Combine melted butter and finely chopped Lindt Surfin bars. Stir constantly until mixture is smooth. Set aside.

3. Combine eggs, yolks and sugar in bowl and place over hot water in a double boiler. Whip mixture until hot and three times its original size. It will have the consistency of whipping cream.

4. Fold egg/sugar mixture into Surfin/butter mix. Empty batter into cake mold.

5. Place mold in larger, shallow pan one-third filled with water. Bake at 425 F for 10-15 minutes. Cool at room temperature. Carefully remove from mold and place in refrigerator for several hours. Decorate with whipped cream dollops.

Katherine's Faux Truffles

Makes 24 medium truffles

8 oz. semisweet chocolate chips
1 cup (2 sticks) unsalted butter
1 Tbsp. cognac or liqueur of your choice raisins (optional)
hazelnuts (optional)
Unsweetened, Dutch process cocoa
Ground cinnamon

1. Combine the chocolate and butter in a 4 cup glass measure, then microwave at MEDIUM LOW for 1 minute, until the chocolate and butter soften. Stir with a wooden skewer or fork. Then stir in cognac or other liqueur to taste, and continue stirring until the mixture is completely smooth.

2. Refrigerate until the mixture can be handled, about 10 minutes. Meanwhile lay out raisins if you wish to roll them into the truffles, or finely chop the hazelnuts if you wish to roll the truffles in nuts. Mix the cocoa with a whiff of cinnamon to coat the truffles.

3. When you're ready to form the truffles, tear off a sheet of waxed paper and place it on a cookie sheet. Lay out the additional ingredients, and the cocoa mixture in which to roll the truffles. Butter your hands, then spoon a heaping tablespoon of chocolate mixture into your left hand. Roll the truffles between your hands, making a rough globe. Roll raisins or nuts into the truffle if you wish, then roll the globe in cocoa mixture and additional chopped nuts if desired.

4. Place the truffles in the refrigerator to chill. Later, pack into tins and store, covered in the refrigerator.

THE REAL, UNMITIGATED TRUTH ABOUT OLIVE OIL

By Betty Pustarfi, Owner, Strictly Olive Oil™

Behind those glistening bottles and glitsy labels lining the olive oil section in any anonymous market, super or otherwise, there lurks a whole lot of subterfuge, if not rancidity, blandness and other gastronomical calamities due mostly to myths and misconceptions about the product, and incompleteness of labeling. We are here today to enlighten you.

First, the terms Extra Virgin, Virgin, and Olive Oil did not spring from the head of some licentious advertising copywriter, but have their roots deep in antiquity. Now, these are technical terms used by The International Olive Council (IOOC) to designate specific grades of oils, the production and grading of which are monitored by the IOOC in member countries.

Betty Pustarfi, owner of Strictly Olive Oil at a demonstration

Extra Virgin - the highest category of oil from quality olives that, after being hand picked, extracted by the first cold pressing, are judged by certified olive oil tasters for flavor and aroma. The oil is then chemically analyzed, the most important analysis being the acid content. This must be under 1%, and the importance of this is: the lower the acidic level the longer the shelf life. And, the shelf life of olive oil is not measured from when you open the bottle, it is measured from harvest. If the bottle you are contemplating has neither the harvest date or a best-used-by date, or your merchant cannot with veracity answer that question, do not buy it at extra virgin price or with flavor expectations. Note well: the typical shelf life of a bone fide extra virgin oil is 18 months to two years from harvest.

Virgin - the next level: quality olives, hand picked, first cold press but for some reason, be it climate, production methods, etc. the acid level is somewhere between I and 3%. This means, the flavor will rapidly drop off. You won't find much of it around. particularly imports. By the time it's received, it has lost most of its flavor.

Olive Oil - for brevity, I will lump together all the oils that are Virgin rejects, pressed from inferior olives, pressed from what is left over from the Virgin pressings. These usually are contaminated, and are therefore chemically refined. The refining removes all flavor, color and produces an oil with a high acid level which is probably rancid before it arrives on above mentioned shelf. it is many times called "Extra Light (lite)" and is the ranting of a demented advertising copywriter. Or, a little colored extra virgin oil is added, and, voila, in the United States, can be called Extra Virgin. WHY???

Because, dear readers (sob), The United States does not belong to the IOOC, is not subject to its labeling standards, and anything can be called "Extra Virgin" that does not have to be further refined. There is no requirement for acid level.

Also, be alert to the designation "product of", not just "imported from": the olives might be from anywhere.

So once you know the difference between the grades, and know that extra virgin oil is not just a lubricant, but a luscious condiment, it is all a matter of style preference, and that is why Strictly Olive Oil exists: To let you determine the style you prefer. And olive oil style, like wine, varies tremendously with the type of olive, climate, production methods and can range from quite peppery and herbaceous to nutty and buttery.

SURPRISE! Some three dozen varieties are opened for comparative tastings each Friday and Saturday at my olive oil tasting bar at The Bountiful Basket, 153 Crossroads Blvd.. The Crossroads Shopping Center, Carmel, 625-4457. Or private seminars and tastings can be arranged. Don't miss out!

The Bruce Ariss Wharf Theater is located on Old Fisherman's Wharf No. 1 in Monterey. Tickets are $15 adults, $8 age 12 and under. 649-2332 or 372-1373.

Candida

George Bernard Shaw's "Candida" is the third production of the Staff Players Repertory Company Season, one that is devoted to "Great Words, Great Voices."

The drama plays at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 2:30 p.m. Sundays, Jan. 23 through Feb. 21.

Setting is the Indoor Forest Theatre, located at Santa Rita and Mountain View in Carmel, under the summer outdoor Forest Theatre stage.

Tickets are $12 general, $9 for students and seniors. 624-1531.

Carmel's Mystery Dinner Theater

The General Store/Forge in the Forest provides the setting for a series of dinner/mysteries staged by Deadly Diversions, an ensemble created by Chuck Thurman.

The mystery begins at 8 p.m. every Wednesday and the evening includes a four-course meal and entertainment for $45. The restaurant is on Junipero at Fifth, Carmel-by-the-Sea. 624-2233.

Fiddler on the Roof

The inaugural production of the Carmel Children's Musical Theatre of the Forest Theatre Guild is "Fiddler on the Roof." Showtime is 7:30 p.m. Thursday through Sunday, Jan. 29-31.

"Fiddler" will be presented at the Carmel Youth Center, Fourth and Torres, Carmel. Tickets are $10. 626-1681.

The 25th Annual Olio Revue

The Troupers of the Gold Coast stage this, their 534th production since June of 1937, at California's First Theatre, Scott and Pacific, Monterey. Each year The Troupers put together the best of the previous year's Olios, and give the audience an opportunity for plenty of "booing and hissing."

The annual Olio Revue plays at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays through January. 375-4916.

Wilde About Oscar

Unicorn Theatre presents the premiere of a new play based on the bittersweet life of Oscar Wilde, titled "Wilde About Oscar." Carey Crockett takes the title role in this production which he adapted with Morgan Stock.

This original production is selected from the writings, plays and letters of Oscar Wilde. The cast also features Robert Colter, Ron Cohen, Peter Eberhardt, Jody Gilmore, Lucian Leutzinger, Fred Nielson and Catherine Quinn.

Curtain is at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 7 p.m. Sundays through Feb. 22.

Winnie-the-Pooh Returns to the Hundred Acre Wood

A storybook background sets the stage for the Family Fantasy Theatre interpretation of classic children's stories by A.A. Milne.

Carey Crockett adapted and directs this tale, which is populated by the likes of Tigger, Piglet, Kanga and Roo, and, of course, Winnie the Pooh.

Curtain is at 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. Saturdays and 3 p.m. Sundays through March 2 at the Hoffman Playhouse, 320 Hoffman (at Lighthouse) in New Monterey. All tickets are $5 and reservations are advised. 649-0259.

Children's Musical Theater premieres 'Fiddler' Thursday

THE CARMEL Children's Musical Theatre of the Forest Theater Guild will mount its premiere production of "Fiddler on the Roof" at 7:30 p.m. next Thursday, Jan. 29 in the Carmel Youth Center, Fourth between Junipero and Torres.

Thirty-one teens and two 10-year-olds are in the cast, with three teens in the orchestra. Lights will be designed and run by Carmel High School senior, Dashiel Nemeth.

Music will be conducted by Rumiana Drumeva.

Carol Hart, dramatic/musical director, announced the musical will run through Feb. 7, with evening performances scheduled for Jan. 29, 30 and 31 and Feb. 5, 6 and 7. There will be a matinee performance on Sunday, Feb. 1.

Tickets are $10 and $5 for ages 12 and under. Reservations may be made by calling 626-1681, or advance tickets may be purchased at the Youth Center on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 3 to 6 p.m.

There will be parking on Torres between Third and Fourth avenues.

Hart is planning three productions per year — in winter, spring and summer — and will soon be choosing the spring and summer musicals.

Rare Finds on the Peninsula

Scotch House

Carmel, with its half-timbered cottages and misty morns, retains more than a touch of Highland spirit. The town is also home to the oldest Scottish shop in the United States, Scotch House on Ocean Avenue near Dolores.

The clothing, accessories and accouterments of that Highland nation are all gathered at this shop. Of course, Scotch House is famed for its top-drawer Scottish merino, lambswool and cashmere sweaters for men and women. Really, the very items one would encounter on a shopping tour of Scotland are all available right here.

From videos to Edinburgh crystal to hand-painted armies of toy soldiers, Scotch House has it all. They can outfit a regiment of bagpipers, complete with kilts and sporrans. This is also the place to find that perfect dinner jacket for an elegant evening.

Scotch House can special order anything to meet special size or tartan specifications.

Want to investigate your family name? This shop can even help in that department. Scotch House is open 10:30 to 6 daily and noon to 5 on Sunday, or call 624-0595.

PEZZINI F·A·R·M·S

In 50 years of farming the Central Coast, the Pezzini family has learned a thing or two about what makes the finest produce this side of the Santa Lucia Mountains.

Their store, Pezzini Farms, located at the entrance to the Crossroads opposite the Rio Grill, is the resource for top-drawer fruits and vegetables, ready-made entrees and a wide range of gift packages that sing the praises of local agriculture.

Stop by any day and see what's on the menu at the Artichoke Café. Succulent artichokes will be pulled from the steamer and served with an exquisite dipping sauce. You'll often find fresh salads and fruit plates, artichoke soup, stuffed artichokes or other vegetables that are steamed to perfection.

The shop is stocked with succulent salsas, pasta sauces and specialty food items from many sources. It's also the source for the Pezzini Farms' line of dipping and pasta sauces, artichoke pesto and artichoke spread.

Treat yourself or the cooks on your gift list with a beautifully presented herb spray, garlic braid or chili string. Pezzini Farms also mail orders the world's finest artichokes to the lucky people on your gift list.

Pezzini Farms is well worth investigating. And it's open every day. Call 626-2734.

Casualís

Want to look like a pro and feel like a pro? Then shop Casualís, a new men's sportswear store located in Carmel Plaza. Casualís offers fine American, German and Italian sportswear for "the man with an attitude."

Ginger Vandivert and her sons, John and Cory, operate this family business, which has sister stores in Scottsdale, Arizona. The Carmel Casualís is located on the fountain level of Carmel Plaza, Ocean Avenue at Mission Street.

The shop is amply stocked with high-end men's shirts, sweaters, golf wear and accessories. Designers represented include Descente, Como, Riscatto and Arturo Garibaldi.

This unique sportswear is backed by exemplary customer service. The staff is happy to carry out special orders, mail outs and alterations of your purchases.

Casualís is open every day. Stop by or call 626-6817.

What's New with Meg

Her name is Louise Nachman but, since 1980, she also answers to the name Meg. Indeed, for 17 years the column "What's New with Meg?" has been written by Louise, for the simple reason that the original Meg moved to France, and Louise inherited the column.

Like her predecessor, Louise Nachman scours the Monterey Peninsula for new businesses to write about. Her column appears every other week in these pages.

The column profiles businesses new and old, with the distinguishing feature that Louise always looks for places "of quality" for readers to investigate.

"I want my readers to know that I don't write about just anybody. I choose my clients carefully," Louise explains.

Louise interviews her subjects face-to-face and draws upon her varied experiences to write profiles that are individual and creative. Among her previous occupations was working for Steve Allen, whom she describes as a "lovable workaholic."

Look for "What's New with Meg" biweekly in The Carmel Pine Cone. To reach Louise Nachman, call 646-9616.

Morgan and June Stock, hostess Flo Snyder, Raymond and Alice Hovey smile for the camera at Snyder's Armenian Christmas party.

Monterey County Symphony board members Joan DeVisser and Pam McGowin chat with guest artist Glenn Dicterow, conductor Clark Suttle and Judy Higgerson Jan. 16 at the Friends of MCS luncheon held at the Highlands Inn.

Pity the poor mortals who've not savored Armenian cuisine

People and Places

By Dodie Barkley

THE INVITATION arrived composed in warm colors. A bulletin read at the top: "JOIN THE GANG!" Beneath was a large image of people dressed as Armenian royalty of old.

That was Flo Snyder's (she is 100 percent Armenian) wonderful invitation to an Armenian Christmas party, always held a few weeks after the traditional Christmas at her Ocean Avenue home in Carmel.

When gourmet cooks like Artie Early and chef Wendy Brodie attend a feast of international goodies at someone's home, you can believe that it is going to be great. And, again, this year it was.

Wendy described to me how some of the fabulous desserts are made, and I was duly impressed.

"When you understand the ingredients and the kind of work that goes into making them, you can understand why they taste so good," Wendy said. And, gourmands Morley Brown, Bob Bussinger, Ron Weitzman, Raymond and Alice Hovey, Gus Barkley, Norma Jean Hodges, Lee Early, June and Morgan Stock and all the others there, told me that if they are invited anywhere else that day, they refuse because they never want to miss Flo's gorgeous Armenian Christmas parties.

Armenian string cheese, Armenian lamb sandwiches, dolma (stuffed grape leaves), Yalanchi, Bereg, Lamajune, all foods looking like they carried 1,000 calories each, were set upon a lovely table in Flo's glistening white dining room. At the bottom of the invitation there was an Armenian quotation, which in English means: "food with an attitude." Yes, and what a delicious attitude!

Snyder's quite a gal. She was formerly involved with tourism, chambers of commerce and her walls hold many pictures of Flo with California governors and famous sports figures. Recently, a story published in The Pine Cone described why she moved to Carmel. Former California Governor Deukmejian wrote her a letter about it, saying that it was delightful.

Snyder told me that Armenia was the first country to embrace Christianity in A.D. 301. In A.D. 2000 there will be a celebration of 1,700 years of Christianity, held in Armenia. Religion aside, can't you just imagine the kind of food that will be served there? Let's go, yes?

■ Symphony gathers for lunch at the Highlands Inn

Gazing through an enormous cypress tree at the creamy white-capped waves breaking over sun-bleached rocks while sipping a glass of Merlot at the Highlands Inn isn't a bad way to go, is it, mes amis?

Such was the beginning of a musical interlude last Friday. The ever-growing Friends of the Monterey County Symphony held a pre-concert luncheon featuring the concertmaster of the New York Philharmonic, violinist Glenn Dicterow.

Even Old Sol himself came out because he didn't want to miss any of it. It was remarkable for me because I was seated next to Conductor Clark Suttle and directly across from Dicterow, both of whom fascinated us with their musical insights.

Suttle has the true artist's temperament together with a fabulous sense of humor, and Dicterow evinced a wonderfully sensitive attitude, which precludes him from ever taking anything for granted. I had the feeling that Dicterow knows that an artist can never be completely sure of himself; and that is what is going to make him an ever greater performer.

After a deliciously light repast, Lucretia Butler thanked everyone for attending the luncheon, noting that many people came out to honor the violinist. I spied Judy Higgerson, who, incidentally, underwrote

Conversing about art and artists during the Carmel Gallery Alliance social were board member Billie Di Monaco, artist Ann Cunningham and board member Diana Higgins.

CGA Board Member Corinne Whitaker, Secretary Sandy Phillips of the Telos Group, and CGA President Rob Pitzer turned out for the Gallery Alliance social held at the Kinkade Archival Gallery near Cannery Row.

the luncheon, Alyce Nunes, Pam McGowin, Burt DeVisser, Patti Bumpus and Betsy Slinkard (PR for the American Institute of Wine and Food), Betsy Bryant and Fernando Guzman, among others.

Butler also told members that now is the time to volunteer for the April 30th Garden Show.

Joan de Visser introduced Dicterow, who fascinated us with stories about the family of musicians he hails from. His father, also a violinist, just retired after playing in an orchestra for 50 years. His mother was a pianist and his brother is a violinist and also a doctor.

With a great smile, he told us that his second daughter, aged 21, plays with a rock band.

Dicterow described playing the entire "Rite of Spring" without a conductor. "Imagine playing a piece like that without a conductor?" he mused. "Well, we just took the bull by the horns and got through it," he said, mentioning other times when a situation like that arose. As he finished speaking, everyone kept saying, "I just can't wait to hear him play on Sunday."

■ Carmel Gallery Alliance members converge

It was who's who and what's what at the Carmel Gallery Alliance (CGA) membership social held Jan. 15 at the Thomas Kinkade National Archive Gallery in New Monterey.

Almost 30 Carmel gallery owners, artists and many guests enjoyed their first membership meeting, along with a buffet and exchanges of information and plans.

Conversation about paint, painters and fine works of art was the order of the evening. The CGA is also known for sponsoring the annual Carmel Art Festival, with a repeat program coming up the first week in May.

Pledged to form a cohesive body whose combined energies result in establishing art, artists and art galleries in the city of Carmel, the CGA also promotes Carmel as a respected art community, worldwide.

Among the gallery owners and artists attending were CGA president Rob Pitzer, secretary Sandy Phillips, member Corinne Whitaker, director Billie Di Monaco, member Dianne Higgins, artist Ann Cunningham, Carmel Mayor Ken White and his wife, Jean, Dean and Joanna Chapman and Frank Dobronte.

More information about the Carmel Gallery Alliance can be found at its website, www.carmelga.com.

■ Whalefest '98 hits town with a huge splash

Moby Dick would really enjoy it here in Monterey Bay now, just to see the awesome respect and love people have for his modern-day relatives. The immense grey and blue whales, dolphins and others are celebrated through Feb. 1 as part of Whalefest '98.

The Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History held "A Whale of a Reception" Jan. 16. It featured "Gentle Spirits," an exhibit of mural paintings of whales and other sea creatures by Sausalito artist George Sumner.

Sumner told me that he gave two paintings to Mikhail Gorbachev just before Gorbachev announced that the Berlin wall would be removed. Clint Eastwood, Woody Harrelson, Tony Bennett and Willie Nelson are just a few of the celebrities listed in the program who have collections of Sumner's works.

The whale paintings are huge as are most of the others. I particularly liked one of a seal almost standing on the bottom of the ocean, looking wide-eyed as a huge jellyfish approaches. Sumner titled it, "Hey, Mom, could you come here for a minute, please."

Sumner's main concern is to have people realize that the earth and her creatures are essential to the survival of the human race. As he speaks, you can hear the personal love he reserves for whales. He speaks to them and is a great friend of others who do also.

In the book "Animal Dreaming — The Art and Science of Interspecies Communication," the author, Jim Nollman, talks about communicating with whales. He wanted to know why they sing. Well, after looking at the incredibly beautiful whale paintings, somehow you feel you know why.

Thanks, Paul Finnegan, assistant curator, for inviting me to your nifty Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History. I'll be back!

Moby would have loved to have seen it too, I'll bet!

'98 -'99 season on October 18. He has appeared here before as a cellist," McCarthy said. "He has been the principal guest conductor of the Moscow Symphony and currently is the artistic and music director of the Shaliapin International Academy of Cataloña, Spain."

"The hard part starts now. The seven finalists who come here will have to like us," he said, implying that the selection process works two ways.

There will be young guests soloists, too, appearing with each of the guest conductors.

Season to be expanded

"The other big news," McCarthy said, "is that the symphony is expanding its season. We are moving from six subscription concerts to seven."

As well as Yablonsky, the other finalist guest conductors are:

Enrique Barrios, music director of the Bellas Artes Chamber Orchestra, Mexico City;

Max Bragado Darman, music director of the Louisville Orchestra and the Symphony Orchestra of Castille and Leon, Spain;

Miguel Harth Bedoya, music director of the Eugene Symphony Orchestra and the Lima Philharmonic, Peru;

Darryl One, music director of the Victoria Symphony in Texas;

Bernard Rubenstein, music director laureate of the Tulsa Philharmonic and music director of the San Juan Symphony; and Kate Tamarkin, music director of the Vermont Symphony and East Texas Symphony.

Guest soloists for the 1998-1999 season include Russian cellist Alexander Knyazev; pianist Yakov Kasman; German trumpeter Wolfgang Basch; American clarinetist Burt Hara; American violinist Hoard Zhang and German pianist Oliver Kern.

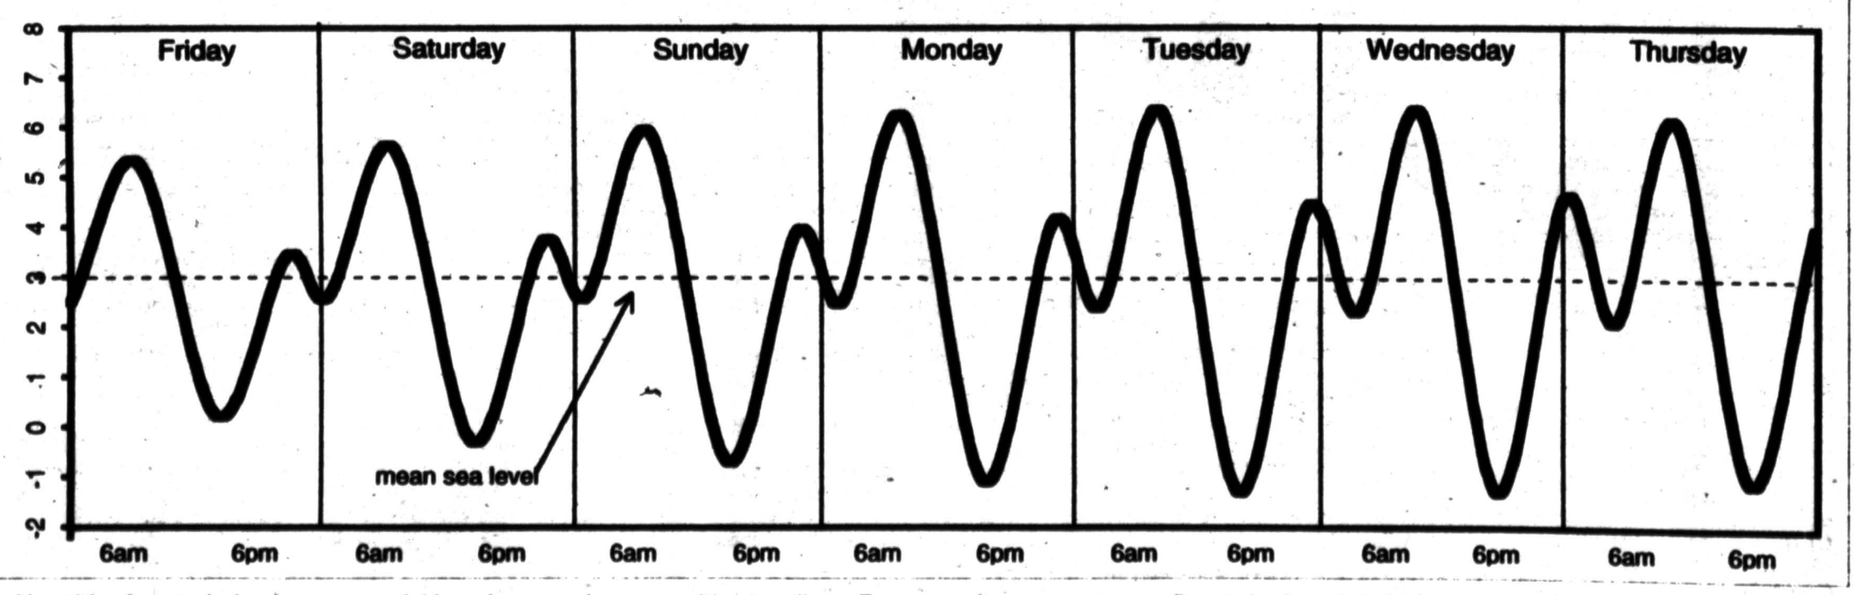
Carmel Bay Tides — January 23 to 29, 1998



• Use this chart to help plan your activities along our incomparable coastline. For example, a sunset campfire at the beach is best planned when there will not be a high tide during the evening hours. Very low tides (especially those below the zero level) provide the best opportunity to explore local tide pools. Fishing is said to be best on days when the tidal variation is greatest. And don't forget that coastal flooding and erosion can be severe when a very high tide coincides with a major storm.

• Tides are primarily caused by the pull of the moon and the sun on earth's oceans. Accordingly, the greatest tides (spring tides) occur when the sun, moon and Earth are aligned (full moon or new moon). When the sun, moon and earth form a right angle tides are smaller (neap tides).

• Every 25 hours there are two high tides and two low tides. "Mean sea level" is the average of all tides and is the same everywhere on the Earth. "Mean high tide" (approximately 4.7 feet on the tide chart) is the average of all local high tides and, in California, is the legal boundary between private coastal lands and publicly-owned tidelands. The zero on tide charts (also called the "datum") is the average of the lower of the low tides that occur in each cycle.

• Chart prepared by The Carmel Pine Cone using data provided by the National Weather Service.

VILLAGE VERSE

TO MY SON

I will not say to you, "This is the Way, walk in it."
For I do not know your way or where the Spirit may lead you.
It may be to paths I never trod, or ships by the sea
Leading to unimagined land afar, or haply to a Star!
Or yet again —
Through dark and perilous places racked with pain and full of fear.
Your road may lead you far from me or near —
I cannot guess or guide,
But only stand aside.
But this I'll say, I know for every truth there is a Way
For each to walk, a right for each to choose, a truth to use.
And though you wander far,
Your soul will know that true path when you find it,
Therefore go!
I will fear nothing for you day or night.
I will not grieve at all because your light is called by some new name —
Truth is the same.
It matters not to call it "Star" or "Sun,"
All Light is one.

— Marjorie Wintermute Schiffeler

(Marjorie Wintermute Schiffeler was a life-long resident of Carmel-by-the-Sea, and died in 1978. Her collected poems, as well as reproductions of her artwork, have been bound and put into the permanent collection in the History Room at Harrison Memorial Library's Park Branch by her son, John Schiffeler of San Francisco.)

House Talk

By Paul & Nellie Brocchini

4th Quarter Report

The real estate buying frenzy that we've reported on throughout 1997 continued unabated in the fourth quarter. Carmel was especially active — registering 81 sales. This is second in our records only to the 83 sales logged during the second quarter of 1997!

The volume of sales in Carmel was up 29% over 1996, also an excellent year. Carmel Valley registered a whopping 39% increase over 1996. Six of the ten Monterey Peninsula markets had sizable volume gains. Overall, volume was up 20% over 1996 and 47% above 1995. It was an incredibly busy year for real estate professionals and one that put smiles on the faces of most sellers.

Prices

Median sales prices were up in five of the markets, remained flat in four markets and decreased 4% in the South Coast. That number, however, cannot be taken too seriously as the volume of sales in the South Coast is not large enough to reflect meaningful median sales prices.

Carmel Valley posted the biggest price gain, 18% above 1996. The Salinas/Monterey corridor was second with a 16% gain. Pacific Grove and Pebble Beach were 10% above 1996.

Carmel showed only a 9% price gain, a significant increase but not as much as those of us in the business thought was underway. When we look later this month at sales by neighborhood, we will find that certain areas of Carmel had dramatic gains.

Why the Hot Market?

People often ask us what is driving the strong market in real estate. The answer is simple: money and lots of it. Government at all levels, federal, state and local is raking in record breaking tax revenues. Company and stock market profits have been strong. Salaries and bonuses are high. Northern California, especially, seems to be awash in money. Silicon Valley is probably the most successful region in history in terms of generating massive revenues

The "Distribution of Sales' chart illustrates the flow of big dollars into our real estate market. Carmel logged 13 sales over one million dollars in the fourth quarter and Pebble

Inflation in Real Estate — Deflation in Wholesale Prices

What is weird to us, who struggled through econ classes at Berkeley, is how does this incredible affluence equates with a year in which wholesale prices went down. Think about it. The country is booming, our local real estate market is outrageously successful, yet we heard on the radio recently that 1997 saw the greatest deflation in wholesale prices since 1986.

How does one account for this contradiction? The only thing that occurs to us is that the manufacturing sector is so efficient and productive that the flow of goods is so immense that no matter how high the demand there is enough product to retain price competition. Remembering our days as retailers, we were always amazed at how much stuff was available at the wholesale shows we attended.

The high tech sector is the most amazing in terms of giving the consumer value for his money with prices spiraling downward on new products almost from the day of launching.

Abundant and endless supply is not, however, the case in real estate, especially in the Carmel area which has very little growth potential even if we had water, which, at present, we don't. The strong buying has eaten-away at our inventory. As choices are reduced and the amount of money chasing those choices remains the same or increases (which appears to be the case at present) sellers are able to obtain increasing amounts of money for their properties.

High & Low Sales Fourth Quarter 1997

Town	Low Sale	High Sale
Carmel	$277,500	$3,900,000
Carmel Vly	$225,000	$2,350,000
D. Rey Oaks	$205,000	$295,000
Marina	$140,000	$270,000
Monterey	$158,000	$702,500
P. Grove	$147,000	$718,850
Pebble Bch	$350,000	$?
Salinas Hwy	$219,000	$1,950,000
Seaside	$ 68,300	$237,000
So. Coast	$430,000	$1,700,000

How about 1998?

As we look ahead, the most striking element of the current market place is the tight inventory. There were 638 listings on January 1, including 194 in escrow. That compares to 767 listings on October 1, with 260 in escrow. These are declines of 17% and 25% respectively.

Inventory is normally low at the beginning of the year, but this year looks leaner than normal. The low number of pending sales appears to presage a lack-luster first quarter in terms of volume. Inventory will build as we work into the year. As choices are broadened, we will see whether or not buyers have the same vigor as in 1997.

Local real estate firm joins Realty World broker network system

Realtor Link

By Jeanette Menter

RUBEN AND Deborah Dominguez, brokers and owners of American Dream Realty in Monterey, have announced that their company has joined Realty World Broker Network System and will now be called Realty World - American Dream Realty. Former owners of a large Century 21 franchise, Ruben and Deborah pointed out that the Broker Network System is "specifically designed for the real estate professional who wants to conduct business under a national franchise name without paying the increasingly higher franchise fees." Realty World has offices throughout the U.S., Canada, Mexico, Israel and the Philippines.

Wendy Lazer listed in prestigious publication

Alain Pinel Realtors recently announced that Wendy Lazer, Broker, was approved by The National Directory of WHO'S WHO In Executives And Professionals and will be included in the 1998-99 edition. We're told that the intent of this discriminating directory is to notify readers that the individuals included have reached a level of 'recognizable success in their field.' The nationally-known publication is respected as a resource for the American marketplace. Congratulations, Wendy!

Deen Rowe

On-line footnote

Coldwell Banker Real Estate Corporation announced that in four months Coldwell Banker Online has generated more than 17,500 customer leads with approximately 10% (1,700 homes) resulting in actual transactions. Wow. The future is here!

"Look at him go!"

We were greatly relieved to see Deen Rowe, veteran real estate agent at Prudential Preferred Properties, up and back at work after his terrifying traffic accident on Carmel Valley Road several weeks ago. Best wishes to you and your family, Deen, for a healthy '98!

Seller has to take house back thanks to noisy neighbors

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

A Burbank homeowner has learned the hard way that those lengthy disclosure forms you fill out when selling your home are not something to take lightly.

Two weeks ago, a California appeals court ruled that Stephen Brown can be forced to take back the home he sold in 1995 — because he didn't tell the buyer about the obnoxious, noisy family that lived next door.

According to the court's decision, over the years that Brown had lived in the house he had called the Burbank Police Department more than 10 times late at night asking for help getting his neighbors to quiet down.

But on the disclosure form, Brown said he was not aware of any noise problems in the neighborhood.

The buyers learned about the noisy family soon after they moved in. They sued Brown, asking for a 'rescission' of the sale, after figuring out that Brown had not told the truth on the disclosure form.

The court order Brown to take the house back.

"I'd have to say it's a logical outcome because that's what the disclosure forms are for," Carmel attorney and real estate expert Jim Heisinger said.

POLICE LOG

Ocean Avenue, but they had left prior to officer's arrival. Officer saw them walk into nearby clothing store and followed. Once they saw officer they left the store and got into a small, red Hyundai driven by a male. Car stopped at Carpenter and Ocean and driver cited for excessive smoke. Later, it was reported that several items of clothing were strewn in the area where the suspicious females had been. All the property was from a clothing store on Ocean and was returned to the shelves. The above-mentioned subjects most likely took the clothing from the store in an attempt to steal it, but left it behind after office observed them.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of an alarm at a residence at Ocean and Scenic. Woman at home advised it was probably the wind that blew a door open.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Subject observed getting ready to sleep in her vehicle behind the Carmel Mission convent. She was contacted and advised of Municipal Code concerning sleeping in her car. She was moved to the front parking lot and advised not to sleep or camp.

Carmel area: A local shopping center continues to have problems with juveniles skateboarding. One such subject received a citation.

Carmel area: On Hwy. 1 in Big Sur the sheriff had to contact a man who made earlier references to being suicidal. He had also been drinking alcohol for two days. Sheriff had the man transported for care.

Carmel area: South of Hwy. 1 in Big Sur a man reports that his car, as well as another woman's car, was burglarized parked across from Sycamore Canyon.

Carmel area: Man called to report that he had lost his black wallet containing credit cards and $60 on Hwy. 1. The sheriff reports that the man pinpointed the whereabouts "at any number of scenic turn-outs on Hwy. 1."

Carmel Valley: Party on Cachagua Road reported a male and female arguing. Area checked and no one was found.

Carmel Valley: A person on Carmel Valley Road said a crystal rock was taken from a business. Time and date of the crime are unknown.

Wants restitution

Dear Editor:

An open letter to the vandals of Saturday evening, December 6, 1997, and their parents:

As a victim of your vandalism I am sure you cannot conceive the tragedy and hardship your senseless behavior caused. I cannot imagine what could motivate anyone to maliciously destroy property and in some cases endanger life such as occurred on that fateful night.

I will inform you that I am as one of your victims, suffered grave hardship that night when you shattered my car windows. I am an elderly female who depends on her car to commute to work. At my age I would not be working could I manage otherwise. The bill for repairs in excess of $319 has shot my budget. I would beseech the parents and these youths to make restitution.

Inasmuch as your minor status prohibits my knowing your identity, I would request payment be made to or through the Pacific Grove police department. They know how to find me.

Name withheld by request, Carmel

'Umbilical cord to the truth'

Dear Editor:

Joe Fitzpatrick's column was the best thing The Pine Cone had going for it.

His fearless and sparkling commentary opened up subjects that the rest of the local media preferred to sweep under the rug.

It appears to me and to Joe's many other fans that is why the Herald, and now The Pine Cone, cut the last umbilical cord to the truth about what's really going on in our community, a sad day for the Peninsula's once-proud news publications.

Evelyn Londahl-Larson, Monterey

'Senseless vitriol'

Dear Editor:

On behalf of many Pine Cone readers, I would like to thank you for no longer exposing us to Joe Fitzpatrick's weekly dose of senseless vitriol. His constant ragging at the Herald and local television stations got old years ago, and his recklessness with the truth tainted the rest of your fine paper. Keep up the good work.

Michelle Hersch, Carmel Valley

Water tank 'from Mars'

Dear Editor:

Hats off to Jere Kersnar for taking a stand against another "large addition" in Carmel, and I feel that it is time to take a look at our Planning Commission.

My feeling is that "no one is watching the store" and many variances are being approved without thought to long term consequences.

People with absolutely no knowledge of the history and customs of Carmel are buying property here, and, without regard for long term residents, doing exactly as they please.

A recent case in fact was the remodeling of the house next door to me, where my new "neighbor" received permission to cut down seven fifty-year-old mature trees which had protected my home from the elements for the twenty-five years that I have lived in Carmel. Apparently approval was obtained from the Forestry Department and the trees were removed on a Friday evening when the Planning Commission was closed.

Before the aforementioned remodeling, residents from our area attended the Planning Commission meeting and approved an addition to the rear of this residence. However, nothing was mentioned about the trees or a 5,000 gallon water tank to be installed in the back yard, complete with pump to transport water up the hill.

When we complained to the Planning Commission, the Head Planner said the tank was supposed to be submerged and that while he was away someone allowed a variance for the tank to remain above ground because it would damage the roots of a "specimen oak." Actually it was a scrub oak like the one on my property.

When the tank was installed, (again after the Planning Commission was closed) the neighbors were shocked. This monstrous black tank stood ten feet above ground and looked like a space ship had just landed from Mars.

Again, we complained; this time to the Director of Planning and were told "It just slipped through. We're sorry."

My question is: Why are we spending taxpayer dollars to hire an "expert" from Colorado to define the character of Carmel when what we need is a Planning Commission that is doing it's job?

Shirley Winter Wylly, Carmel

'Water for us — a dam rational solution!'

Dear Editor:

Definitions of a dam: a barrier to prevent the flow of water; reservoir: a place where water is collected for us when wanted. Isn't that simply what we need to protect the environment of the Carmel river? Our forefathers realized this and built the Los Padres and San Clemente reservoirs. We have outgrown them and need more storage for those of us who are here now and want to continue the quality of life that a secure water supply will insure. Are some selfishly trying to stop growth by destroying the quality of life for us and our children to follow? I can understand the folks in Cachagua who are against the construction of a dam in their quiet area. Sometimes, you must have some disruption for the benefit of all. I can't sympathize with those I call professional jammers, who delay the project and drive costs up with issues that have been thoroughly studied by experts finding a new dam our best water storage solution. These jammers don't mind causing delays and rate increases to cover legal fees, while the State will continue to impose fines.

D. Crivello, Carmel

'Nice guy hurting'

Dear Editor:

Last evening my wife and I, and another couple, went to the State Theater to see "Good Will Hunting." The movie was delightful. The theater was a nightmare. We had a most uncomfortable experience. The seats are at a neck-wrenching angle. They are so close together, one has indentations on his knees for three days. My wife had a broken seat, and she could hardly walk when she stood up to leave. The temperature was at least ninety, and the quality of the air was suffocating. The stale air, and the smell of the musty carpet are health hazards, especially during this flu season.

I would donate my last dollar to have this faded lady restored to her former glory. Until that refurbishing takes place, movie goers be forewarned. If the ad for the State Theater reads "upstairs," STAY HOME!

Tom LaBossiere, Monterey

Actors, rockers, athletes just can't resist the Pro-Am

THE AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro Am is probably best known for the long list of celebrities in the amateur field of 168 players. Whereas the intimate days of Crosby, Harris and Hope clowning their way around the fairways are past, a new breed of 90's celebrities has joined some AT&T stalwarts to make up the best show in golf. Who are the players to watch in 1998?

Orel Hershiser of the San Francisco Giants trades pitching for swinging.

MUSICIANS — Long time participant Glen Campbell will join other returning players such as Glenn Frey (from rock group The Eagles), Kenny G, country star Vince Gill and rocker Huey Lewis. Johnny Mathis returns to the lineup after a few years in hiatus. A noted newcomer is Darius Rucker of the golf crazed band Hootie & The Blowfish, but the best new celebrity golfer in the field is hard rocker Alice Cooper and his spookily low handicap. Sorely missed but forever remembered will be John Denver.

ACTORS — Tournament Chairman Clint Eastwood leads a cast including Kevin Costner (no, he won't be playing with Tiger Woods), last years winner Andy during the weekend.

They always brought back one of those alligator loaves of bread with the marzipan frog in its mouth. My brothers and sisters would argue over who gets to bite the legs off the alligator, who has to eat the eyes, and who gets the frog.

Bill Hogan

A year or so later, my folks bought a cabin in Big Sur and the Crosby weekend became a family tradition. "The Crosby" became a good excuse to ditch school for a day or two, invite down some friends and spend a long weekend at the cabin.

The dinner conversations throughout the 60's and 70's always had to do with the big name players or the celebrities in the tournament. Dad would talk about powerful Jack Nicklaus and the local San Francisco kid Johnny Miller. Mom would recall the polish of a guy named Arnie and the colorful slacks on Doug Sanders.

Most of all, the amateurs were discussed with statements like "you know, that Bing Crosby really can play," or "I swear Dean Martin was loaded," or "did you see what Bob Hope did on 16?"

Weather was always a topic of conversation too. Dad would say, "Once we got there, the sun came out and it was actually quite warm," only to be rebuked by Mom shortly thereafter. "Yeah, but the mud soaked through my shoes and my feet stayed cold and wet all day," she would complain. "We wanted to go home, and you guys kept telling us 'just one more foursome.'"

When Spyglass became part of the tournament in 1967 the talk turned to the difficult course. "What are those pros complaining about, they can make $100,000 a year!" someone would say, only to be countered with "but we want to see them make birdies, not double bogeys." Now it's come full circle and the pros love Spyglass, and that $100,000 figure is an average week for some, all things considered.

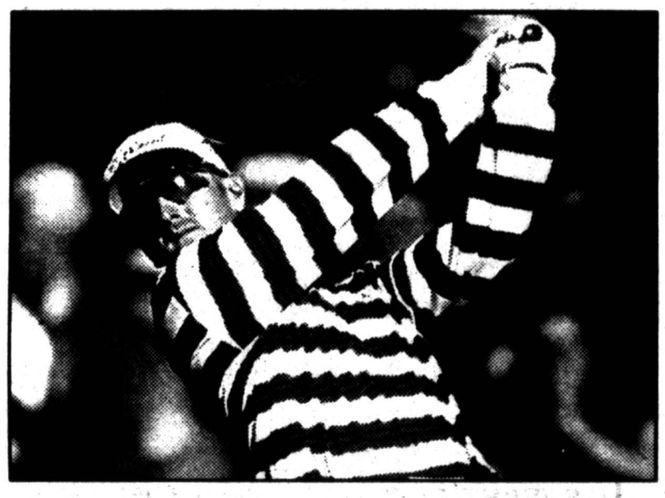
Who's Not Coming

Despite the extra $300,000 in prize money donated by Bank of America to attract the best PGA Tour field possible, many top pros won't play the AT&T this year. Fred Couples "might play" according to Tournament Director Lou Russo, but Greg Norman, Ernie Els and John Daly, plus a number of other top draws, won't be here. It's their loss — because the AT&T Pro-Am is golf's greatest fete.



David Duval, who shot a tournament record 62 last year at Pebble Beach Golf Links, will return this year. He comes into this year's AT&T on a hot streak, being the first player in PGA history to win his first three career victories in consecutive starts.

'Improving' 5th Hole At Pebble Is Touchy Affair

Jack Nicklaus designed the new fifth hole at Pebble.

Nicklaus: Altering the fifth hole at Pebble is like 'adjusting the smile on the Mona Lisa'

By JERRY STEWART

IF EVERYTHING goes as planned, this year's AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am will be the swan song for the existing fifth hole at Pebble Beach Golf Links.

While Pebble Beach Co. officials say the new fifth hole will only improve the course, this year can't help but be a sentimental moment in time. Take a close look, for it will be different from now on.

Last year, the company initiated plans to construct a new hole, hoping to fulfill the dream of Pebble Beach founder Samuel F.B. Morse, who had always wanted the course to hug the entire beautiful coastline immediately next to the bluffs.

Now, according to RJ Harper, the director of golf for the Pebble Beach Co., the only issue delaying the process is the presence of an old oak tree that some local environmental activists insist should remain and not be cut down.

"All of the approvals are in place," said Harper. "We are discussing our decisions and are about a month away from resolving the tree issue and beginning the project."

The Monterey County Planning Commission unanimously approved the new hole and tree replacement last November.

"We're looking at all the alternatives concerning the tree," said Ted Horton, vice president of resource management at Pebble Beach. Several foresters have described the oak as dying from oak root fungus and heart rot.

Work on the new hole, which was designed by Jack Nicklaus, would begin in April and be done by Paragon Construction, a company associated with Nicklaus' Golden Bear Inc., headquartered in North Palm Beach, Fla.

Exercise in presumptuousness

Announcing his plans last year, Nicklaus quipped, "Changing a hole at Pebble Beach is like adjusting the smile on the Mona Lisa.."

The new hole will complete the vision that Morse and course architect Jack Neville had when they began constructing the course back in 1916.

Morse, founder of Del Monte Properties Co., had earlier sold the beachfront parcel for less than $20,000 to a Mr. Beatty for a homesite. When he tried to buy it back or trade any other lot in the forest, he was turned down cold. So Morse was forced to route the fifth hole inland instead.

In 1995, when the property again came on the market, the Pebble Beach Co., along with other interested parties, purchased the land for just under $9 million, hoping to finish what Morse and Neville had started 75 years earlier.

"The new hole will fulfill Morse's original vision," said Harper. "The fifth hole as it is now was just a convenient way to get around the Beatty property and back to the coast. The new hole will enhance the course because play-

AT&T PEBBLE BEACH NATIONAL PRO-AM — AT&T WEEK

Tournament not enough? Try Golf Expo

IF AT&T Week isn't enough to satisfy your appetite for golf, the Monterey Peninsula Golf Expo is sure to provide some second helpings.

Slated for Saturday, January 31, at the Monterey Conference Center from 1 to 8 p.m., the exposition showcases thousands of golf products and services from across the United States.

Also featured are hourly golf clinics and demonstrations, a celebrity autograph session and an all-star celebrity auction.

The auction will feature donated golf memorabilia from such stars as Arnold Palmer, Tiger Woods and Tom Watson as well as celebs like Vince Gill and Kevin Costner.

"If you have an interest in golf, you don't want to miss it," said Labeth Hall, expo director.

Admission is $4 per person, and all proceeds benefit the Monterey County Special Olympics. For more info please call 646-5995.

5TH HOLE

ers will continue from the fourth to the fifth along the coast, increasing the drama with the wind and water."

Currently, the par-3 fifth hole is a 166-yard blind uphill shot with a green that slopes severely from back to front.

"The fifth hole has always been a non-descript hole," said Paul Spengler, vice president of golf for the Pebble Beach Co. "It's given very good players a hard time."

It's given greenskeepers a hard time, too.

The green on the fifth hole is almost constantly shaded by trees, allowing moisture to accumulate. Tubes were installed underneath the green to help drain it, but the problem has never completely gone away.

"There is no air circulation on the green," said Horton. "Plus the tee shot is uphill and blind, which is not the best shot for a par three."

The proposed new hole will be somewhat longer from the professional tees, but will play downhill instead of uphill. A wooden bridge starting behind the fourth hole's green and stretching across a ravine will link the two holes. The green will be similar in size to the existing fifth.

According to Spengler, during construction players will use the old fifth so there will be no interruption in play.

Last year, the 79-year-old course got a facelift when the bluffs along 17 and 18 were restored to combat erosion

"Some areas still need to be adjusted," said Horton. "Structurally, the work is very strong and is directing the water away as we planned."

If work begins soon on the new fifth hole, the completion time is estimated to be about six months, meaning that the new hole's first major event would be the 1998 Pebble Beach Invitational Presented by Callaway Golf, held in November. During construction, golfers will continue play on the existing fifth hole.

"The new hole will have an absolutely magnificent view and will fulfill the vision of Morse," said Horton.

It doesn't seem possible, but if the plans go through, one of the grandest golf courses ever may just get a little grander.

CADDIES

Call them Men in White, course 'technicians,' true unsung heroes

By JERRY STEWART

OVERSIZED WOODS and irons. Titanium. Bubble shafts and electronic yardage finders.

In the last few years, the game of golf has changed dramatically, yet one feature has remained the same since the game began.

They are a part of golf's tradition, found at all of golf's greatest courses, from Pebble Beach Golf Links to St. Andrews in Scotland.

To some, they are the unsung heroes, leading unsuspecting golfers past unseen hazards and pitfalls.

During this year's AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am, they will be guiding PGA professionals, celebrities and amateurs around some of golf's most beautiful yet treacherous courses.

They are the men in white: The caddies.

"Playing with a caddy is the ultimate way to experience a golf course," said Bob Deluca, who's been a caddy at Pebble Beach since 1992. "We're like course technicians."

How would you like to exchange jobs with Mike 'Fluff' McCowan, caddie to Tiger Woods?

Eyesight to the blind

According to Deluca, having a caddy is wise. "Every course has different elements to deal with and the caddy knows what they are."

This can be especially true when you're talking about the AT&T's big three: Pebble Beach Golf Links,

RULES & REGS

PGA: Cameras Have Gotten 'Out Of Hand'

Crowds, like this one above from the '96 tournament, will have to do without cameras, although they will be allowed in practice rounds. At left, Bill Murray is mobbed as usual, also in the '96 event.

At AT&T, sound of clicking replaced by sound of silence

By JERRY STEWART

FANS WHO attend this year's AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am better hope they have a photographic memory, because one unique aspect of the illustrious tournament is history.

After decades of allowing cameras on the courses during tournament rounds, a feature that has made the event a real fan favorite, the PGA Tour has decided to put its foot down, banning cameras from the courses except for practice rounds.

Although new to the AT&T Pro-Am, the no-camera policy has been in effect for years at other events on the Tour.

"Cameras had been allowed at the AT&T because of the celebrities," said Paul Spengler, vice president of golf for Pebble Beach resorts. "But in the last few years it's gotten a little out of hand."

Last year, as a throng followed the Tiger Woods-Kevin Costner group, many clicked and flashed away as the duo took their respective swings.

And for many of the players competing professionally, the sound of clicking during a backswing is as annoying and distracting as a leaf blower at six o' clock in the morning.

"I think that in the last few years PGA Tour officials probably heard from some of the players," Spengler said.

Different crowd

According to Spengler, because of the celebrities and the tournament's format, the AT&T attracts a different crowd than the usual Tour event.

"Many of the fans who come to the AT&T are new to the game," said Spengler. "They're here to see Tiger Woods or celebrities and, unfortunately, some of those who now attend don't know the etiquette of the sport."

Other PGA Tour events that feature Pro-Am play are the Bob Hope Classic, the Walt Disney World Classic and the Las Vegas Invitational. But in those events, amateurs compete only on Wednesday.

"The AT&T is unique in that amateurs can play up to Sunday, and some even get to play in the final round if they qualify," said Spengler.

As usual, the fans will come, just to see the likes of Tiger Woods, Kevin Costner and all the rest.

But if you want to capture the moment on film, you'll have to do it at a practice round.

Practice rounds for this year's event are scheduled for Monday, Jan. 26 through Wednesday, Jan. 28 at the tournament's three courses — Pebble Beach Golf Links, Spyglass Hill and Poppy Hills.

For those seeking autographs, a designated area will be available at the 18th green of each course.

COMMENTARY

Although transformed from old days, AT&T shines as first-rate tournament

By BILL HOGAN

The overall entertainment value is probably better than ever before and no single event on the Monterey Peninsula means as much to our community.

WHEN THE AT&T took over sponsorship of the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am in 1986, there was the general opinion that the tournament would never be the same.

In one sense, that's true because the faces have changed a little bit and there is a larger corporate presence. In the old days, you could get Bing Crosby or Bob Hope to pose for pictures and maybe sing a tune together. The biggest party was perhaps the Clambake or the California Golf Writers Dinner at Monterey Peninsula CC.

Nowadays, some of the 20 hospitality tents at Pebble Beach hold more corporate guests that the events of old combined. No longer are cameras allowed during tournament days and autographs will be restricted to certain areas. (See page 12D.) But the overall entertainment value is probably better than ever before and no single event on the Monterey Peninsula means as much to our community.

The 1998 AT&T will generate over $2 million for more than 85 local charities and nonprofits, making up a very sizeable portion of their non-profit budgets. If you ask me, or any kid at the Boy's and Girls Club in Seaside, or a patient at the Hospice of the Central Coast, or participants in the Special Olympics, we should say "thanks" to the corporations for helping us out!

Golf in January

In addition, the tournament is probably the best marketing tool we have for Monterey Peninsula tourism. Think of those people sitting in their house in Minocqua, Wisconsin, where it's six degrees outside and anything that does not run on gas is frozen solid. Their television set is tuned to CBS and they're laughing at Bill Murray pulling a tuna out of the ice cream cart or Nick Faldo wearing a grunge-rock wig.

Suddenly, that threat of rain at Pebble Beach does not sound too bad, does it? Those television shots of migrating grey whales and playful otters in the surf look pretty good, eh? "What a beautiful coastline," they say to themselves. "And they're playing golf in January for crying-out-loud."

So they pick up their phone and try to call Pebble Beach for reservations. They're not the only ones. During the telecast, the reservations department at Pebble Beach Resorts is temporarily staffed up to accommodate the huge increase in calls, and hotels and resorts around the Peninsula feel the effects of the free publicity for weeks on end.

The AT&T is big business to not only golf courses and hotels, but also to our local restaurants, bars, shops, galleries and yes, even newspapers. In addition to the thousands of people who stay and spend watching Jerry Pate putt on the Pebble Beach practice green.

"Man, he just looks like a golfer," I said to myself as I admired these guys who seemed to live the perfect life. A few minutes later, one of the guys putting approached me and asked if I could caddy for him tomorrow because his caddy had unexpectedly quit. "Sure," I said, and he told me to meet him the next day at Spyglass.

"Well, I don't know his name," I told my dad when I got home, realizing that I had no idea who had just hired me, or what he was planning to pay me. It was about that time that Dad thought a crash course in caddy etiquette would be in order. "Just keep your mouth shut, don't walk on the green and let him select the clubs." Seemed simple enough.

The next morning I was there in the Spyglass parking lot when he pulled up in his huge Cadillac. I was relieved because I assumed his name would be on his golf bag and I could handle the rest from there. When he opened his trunk and the huge bag read Bob Kostelecky in bold letters, just under a Las Vegas casino logo, I was relieved again. "OK, he's an amateur," I said to myself, realizing that I had never heard of the guy and hopefully he would-

for the week, there are thousands of day-trippers from the Bay Area who not only lay out $30 for a ticket, but they'll have lunch somewhere, shop a bit in Carmel and enjoy dinner in Monterey.

This increased spending trickles down to each of us and helps all of our businesses. It is the one event, each and every winter, that we can count on for an added boost to our economy.

It keeps getting better, too. This year will be easier for fans, because the AT&T Pro-Am tournament committee has done a good job of attracting more celebrities and has spread them out over the three tournament courses. Therefore, the huge throngs of people won't be concentrated on one course, making tournament viewing more enjoyable than in years past.

Besides the huge amounts AT&T contributes to sponsor the event, other large corporations have helped out too. Wells Fargo Bank has added an additional $300,000 to the professional purse to attract a stronger field and CBS Television has lengthened its contract for another 5 years.

These financial commitments and the continued success of the tournament help fuel the Monterey Peninsula economic fire, and we should be grateful. As long as the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am continues, our community benefits.

Shuttle systems adding more options — not all golf related

By TAMARA GRIPPI

ORGANIZERS OF the shuttle service running from Carmel to the tournament are gearing up for their biggest year ever with expanded services, including a daytrip to Big Sur and wine tasting at the Crossroads.

The five-year-old shuttle service, sponsored by the Carmel Innkeepers Association and Carmel merchants, transports people back and forth from the village to the golf course from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. throughout the tournament.

All the inns and participating merchants will have the free passes and schedules available. Forty-one of the 46 inns in Carmel as well as four Carmel Valley inns and the Tickle Pink in the Highlands are participating.

Last year the shuttle service was responsible for transporting more than 12,000 people, according to Michelle McConnell, chair of the AT&T shuttle committee.

"It's been really great in terms of moving bodies," said Debby Alexander of the Carmel Business Association.

The shuttle is convenient for those who aren't quite die-hard golf fans who might want to take a break from the tournament, Alexander said. "If you're out there with your husband and it's raining, you can say, 'Forget this.'"

The shuttle picks up along the streets where the inns are and drops off people at the equestrian center in Pebble Beach. Shuttles leave the Equestrian Center six times each hour.

The innkeepers association received a grant from the Monterey County travel and tourism alliance to help pay for the project.

"Our shuttle has made so much of an impact, we've gotten calls from corporate people all over the state," McConnell said.

"The idea of parking off site is becoming more attractive for spectators."
— Mark Verbonich
Community affairs, P.B. Co.

On schedule

Shuttles are available to move people in and around the tournament. The AT&T also brings people in from outlying parking areas at Ford Ord, north of the Peninsula.

And the Pebble Beach Co. shuttles in people who park in outlying areas of the golf course. The company also offers an internal shuttle to take people from course to course.

"It's a very successful system," said Mark Verbonich, vice president of community affairs for the PB company. "The idea of parking off site is becoming more attractive for spectators."

The tournament will also be adding more runs from Pebble Beach this year.

The tournament and Pebble Beach sponsored shuttles will be making runs all day. People can expect the course-to-course shuttles to travel every five minutes, while the shuttles coming from Fort Ord and downtown Carmel will be arriving every 10 minutes.

This year the innkeepers association's shuttles will also be making runs to Carmel Valley, the Crossroads and one midday trip to Big Sur.

AT&T Is Economic Boon All Around

■ Tournament to give Peninula economy $12 million injection

By TAMARA GRIPPI

WITH ABOUT 120,000 visitors expected during tournament week, Peninsula businesses can anticipate a sizable windfall at a time of year when the tourist trade usually slacks off.

Overall, the Peninsula economy is liable to experience a $12 million jolt.

In Carmel, the motels will be full Thursday through Sunday of tournament week, according to Debby Alexander, executive director of the Carmel Business Association. If the weather is nice, people might be inclined to stay a little longer, Alexander said.

Local restaurants will also have the benefit of hungry fans occupying every table. Retail won't do as well as the restaurant and hospitality sectors because most of the visitors are too interested in the golf.

But many retailers have learned that if they stay open a little later in the evening, business really picks up. The shuttles bringing people back to Carmel from the tournament are a key to this equation.

"Some places are amazed at the business they get between 6 and 7 p.m.," said Michelle McConnell, chair of the shuttle committee.

Meanwhile, nearly 100 charities, public entities and nonprofits, including cultural organizations, benefit from funds raised by the tournament. Last year over $2 million was raised for charities, according to Cathy Scherzer of the AT&T public relations office. "This year we hope to meet or exceed that," Scherzer said.

■ Charities, nonprofits to gain from event

MORE THAN $2 million is expected to be raised this year, and the Monterey Peninsula Golf Foundation will be in charge of distributing the funds.

Here is the complete list of area organizations that benefit from the tournament proceeds.

- Alliance on Aging
- Alzheimer's Association
- American Cancer Society
- American Heart Association
- American Lung Association of the Central Coast
- American Red Cross
- ARIEL, Theatrical, Inc.
- Aromas Community Center Foundation
- AT&T Pebble Beach Junior Golf Association
- Beacon House
- Blind and Visually Impaired Center of Monterey County
- Boys and Girls Club of the Monterey Peninsula
- Boys and Girls Club of the Salinas Valley
- California State University Monterey Bay

Pebble poise to hold 100th U.S. Open

By JERRY STEWART

PLANS FOR one of golf's greatest events are well underway as Pebble Beach Golf Links prepares to host the 100th rendition of the U.S. Open in June of 2000.

"We've got the ball rolling and are way ahead of where we were in 1992," said Paul Spengler, vice president of golf for the Pebble Beach Company, referring to the year when Pebble last played host to the U.S. Open.

According to Championship Director RJ. Harper, the company has been formulating plans for the last few years.

"There's a huge demand for corporate sponsorships," said Harper.

Key among the issues being discussed are creating the infrastructure — television and tents, transportation needs and the coordination of 4,000 volunteers.

Pebble Beach Golf Links, which generally ranks third after Pine Valley and Cypress in the world's best golf courses, will also be the site of the U.S. Amateur Golf Championship in 1999.

According to Harper, Spyglass Hill is also being considered as the host for a future major golf championship.

He said the company has requested that Spyglass host the Ryder Cup in 2003 and the U.S. Open sometime in the near future.

About the 100th at Pebble, Harper said, "When the time comes, it's going to be a marvelous place to be," he said

As if it isn't already.

REFLECTIONS

n't take this caddy thing too seriously.

Soon thereafter I found out why the previous caddy had quit. Once Bob had loaded a twelve pack of beer in the tour size bag, it must have weighed a ton. At least it would get lighter as the day went on, I figured.

I guess we were about 100 yards down the first fairway when the professional caddy for Morris Hatalsky realized that I never caddied before. Quietly, he approached me and offered to tutor me for the day. As I look back on it know, I learned more about golf in that one day than any other. He taught me how to carry the bag and rest it on my lower back, how use it as a seat and how to properly pull the flagstick. I learned when and where to walk on the green, how to rake a bunker and how to read the pin location sheets. I also learned to keep the beers coming for Bob.

For the next couple years I would take the week off school and hang until I got a loop. One year, I don't remember when exactly, there was a bunch of rain and most of the players were not going to bother playing on this particular Wednesday. I was standing in the parking lot at Spyglass when Hale Irwin pulled up and wanted to play a hastily arranged nine holes. "Can you caddy for me today?" he asked, "my caddy took the day off." Certainly I would, and off we went to the first tee, where we were joined by Raymond Floyd and Clint Eastwood.

Needless to say, that practice round had a larger gallery than the Hatalsky - Kostelecky duo.

Nowadays my wife and I go to the tournament and have friends in town for the weekend. Maybe this year our daughter Haley will overhear someone say "what is Tiger complaining about, he makes $25,000,000 a year." "Yea," somebody will answer, "but we came here to watch him make eagles, not pars."

But Haley will care less and instead have her eyes on that alligator bread, and the prized marzipan frog in it's mouth. That's the important thing, after all.

Spyglass Hill and Poppy Hills.

Currently, there are about 30 caddies who work at Pebble Beach and nearly 45 who patrol the fairways of Spyglass Hill.

During AT&T week, many of those caddies find themselves working with amateurs, since most of the PGA pros already have a caddy.

Pacific Grove resident Casey Boyns, who's caddied for over 17 years, will be doing the same for former San Francisco Giants owner Bob Lurie at this year's event.

"Caddies save most players about five shots a round," said Boyns.

Although the work can be extremely physical, almost all caddies love doing their job for the same reasons: working with people, being outdoors and the game itself.

"I enjoy the freedom and the outdoors," said Martin Hall, an eight-year caddy at Spyglass Hill. "Plus you can work your own schedule."

Among the people Hall has caddied for are PGA pro Nick Faldo, financial wizard Charles Schwab and Indy 500 winner Danny Sullivan.

"I caddied for Faldo during a practice round for the 1992 U.S. Open and he was an incredibly focused individual," said Hall. "It was a gorgeous day, but he never made a comment. He was all business."

Like any job, the daily grind can also be tough on a caddy.

"Sometimes you just sit around waiting for a job," said Deluca. "During the winter it can be rough."

Every now and then some of the caddies demonstrate their passion for the game on the course themselves.

Todd Gjesvold, a Pebble Beach caddy, shot a record-tying 62 at Old Del Monte Golf Course in December 1995. And Boyns, who is 42 years old, won the California State Amateur in 1989 and 1993.

Enviable position

According to Deluca, the caddies that deserve the most respect are PGA tour veterans such as Mike "Fluff" McCowan, who caddies for none other than Tiger Woods. "Those are the guys who have seen it from all sides," said Deluca.

'Every course has different elements to deal with and the caddy knows what they are.'
— Bob Deluca,
Pebble Beach caddie since 1992

Yet life on the tour can also be rough.

"Tour caddies are like gamblers," said Hall. "You gamble that your guy will play well, and it's a week-to-week situation."

Although local caddies generally work only on the Monterey Peninsula, they too have been witnesses to the many different sides of life on the course.

$350 tip

"My best experience was caddying for this guy who had taken lessons but was struggling," said Hall. "So I gave him some tips and he began killing the ball — I got a $350 tip."

One of Hall's more Ripleyesque tales involves the manager of a well-known musician, who, along with his buddies, would play a round of golf at Pebble Beach during the day and then fly to the Playboy Mansion for the evening.

"Three days in a row they flew back and forth," said Hall.

Deluca, who caddied for PGA pro Ronnie Black when Black won the former Pebble Beach/Merrill Lynch Invitational in 1995, said that an experience he had with sports broadcaster Brent Musberger summed up the importance of caddies.

"Musberger was at Spanish Bay and said he wanted a caddy," said Deluca. "His playing partners wanted to use a cart, and Musberger told them, 'I bet that cart can't find the ball for you.'"

They know the game and they've seen it from all angles. They're a part of the game and hopefully always will be.

Without a caddy, a day on the links would indeed be a good walk spoiled.

"Caddies have a tendency to improve people's games," said Deluca. "We're there to help."
